JACKSON JOHNSON STRIKES HANLON ON TROLLEY CAR

Former Police Commissioner Causes Arrest of Shoe Manufacturer.

Jackson Johnson and Richard Hanlon, wealthy St. Louis business men, whose homes are only a few blocks apart in the West End, but who have not heretofore been acquainted, engaged in a lively encounter Saturday on an eastbound Delmar car, and were prevented from doing one another serious injury only by intervention of friends.

Mr. Johnson was arrested by a policeman, who entered the car at Washington and Compton avenues, on Mr. Hanlon's request, but was later released unconditionally. Mr. Hanlon remained on the car.

Mr. Johnson and Mr. Hanlon were sitting on the same seat, near the middle of the south side of the car. Others noticed, when the start was made after a stop at Grand and Finney avenues, that sharp words were being exchanged. The two men squared about in their seats and glared at one another.

Elbows Bothered Him.

The disturbance subsided for a time, and both resumed reading their papers. After the turn had been made from Grand avenue east Mr. Johnson said: "Quit digging your elbows into me, will you?"

Mr. Hanlon's reply was inaudible. Mr. Johnson spoke again, even more angrily: "Well, keep on your own side."

People in the car lowered their papers to look at the two men. As the war of words waxed hotter they forgot all about the papers.

Suddenly Mr. Johnson, who was sitting next to the window, reached over and delivered a swift jab at Mr. Hanlon's jaw. Mr. Hanlon's shoulder and arm went up to ward the blow, and his eyeglasses dropped to the floor.

Both men sprang to their feet and stood facing each other a moment. Then Mr. Johnson sat down again.

"Stay where you are, you!" he said, addressing Mr. Hanlon. "You can't sit in this seat again with me. Understand?"

Hanlon Stands in Aisle.

Mr. Hanlon did not reply. He recovered his glasses and then stood silently in the aisle. There was no other vacant seat.

Just across, a slender man under middle age, was sitting on the seat away from the window. He rose and touched Mr. Hanlon's elbow.

"Have this seat and I'll sit over there," he suggested.

Mr. Hanlon sat down and the slender

ST. LOUIS GIFTS SPEEDILY PASS $100,000 MARK

Churches Join With Business Organizations in Receiving Funds.

St. Louis gifts to the relief of the San Francisco sufferers passed the $100,000 mark at noon Saturday. This is regarded as only the beginning of the work and contributions in the churches Sunday will be followed next week by systematic solicitation and by benefits in theaters, baseball parks, skating rinks and dancing halls.

In the first day's work for the San Francisco relief fund $87,000 was contributed by citizens and organizations of St. Louis.

No sum will be too small for consideration. The Salvation Army will place its kettles on corners downtown, where any amount will be received, and the newspapers will receive contributions, to be turned in to the central committee.

The Clearing House Association has pledged $25,261. The Board of Directors of the Merchants' Exchange pledged that body for $2500, the Real Estate Exchange gave $2277 and expects to give more, newspaper publishers contributed $3500, the Stock Exchange $200, the Live-stock Exchange $1000 and other business organizations sums ranging from $100 to $1000.

Five Stores, $2500.

The largest individual offering at the Merchants' Exchange meeting was by R. C. Kerens, who gave $1000 with a comment on San Francisco as he had seen it a few days before the disaster. D. R. Francis gave $330 for his firm and $250 for himself, Mayor Wells gave $250, and George M. Wright, president of the William Barr Dry Goods Co., although unauthorized, said he felt no hesitancy in pledging at least five large dry goods stores for $500 each—the Grand-Leader, Nugent's, Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney, Barr's and the May Store.

Pledges of $5 to $100 were then received on slips of paper. Twenty-five boxes of California oranges, sent out by the Southern California Fruit Co. for the purpose, were actioned for $155. The first two boxes sold for $50 each, the second two for $25 each and the last for $5. The meeting was called to order by Manley G. Richmond, president of the exchange, and Mayor Wells presided. Several speeches were made.

A fund of $2883.41, left with the Business Men's League from the money raised for the celebration of St. Louis Day at the World's Fair, was turned over Friday to the relief fund.

The Real Estate Exchange held an informal dinner at Hotel Jefferson Friday night, and the occasion was seized for making up a subscription list. The original purpose was to raise $1000, but before the evening was over $2277 had been

FORETASTE OF SUMMER SUNDAY

Ideal Day, With Light Breezes and Fair Skies.

St. Louis is to have an ideal Sunday, according to the local weather bureau. Only a slight lowering of the temperature is predicted — just enough to make baseball fans and lovers of outdoor pastimes happy.

The official forecast:

Rains have been reported from Missouri, Southern Illinois, Ohio Valley, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Indian Territory and Texas. In other sections the weather remains unchanged.

The temperatures are higher all along the Pacific coast and in Los Angeles a maximum of 92 degrees was reached Friday. It is a little warmer in Nebraska, Iowa and southern Michigan, but cooler in northern Wisconsin, upper Michigan and Minnesota.

St. Louis has more Post-Dispatch readers every day than it has homes.

INTRODUCTION WORTH $7500, JURY DECIDES

J. T. Gardner Is Awarded Verdict for That Sum Against M. T. Eldridge—Chairman Shonts' Deposition Said Introduction Was Worth Something.

The jury which heard the testimony in Judge Hough's court in the case of James T. Gardner against M. T. Eldridge considered that an introduction, under the circumstances of the case, was worth $7500, and gave Gardner a verdict Saturday for that amount.

The introduction in question resulted in the sale of a railroad. Eldridge wanted to sell the Cane Brake Railroad. He made an agreement with Gardner, according to the latter, that if Gardner brought about a sale of the road he would be generously compensated. Gardner introduced Eldridge to Paul Morton, former Secretary of the Navy, when he was second vice-president of the Santa Fe Railroad. Morton introduced Eldridge to President Ripley of the Santa Fe. The outcome was that the Santa Fe bought the Cane Brake for $850,000.

Gardner was not paid anything for what he had done toward bringing about the sale and he brought suit for $25,000.

Part of the testimony was a deposition of Theodore P. Shonts, chairman of the Panama Canal Commission, in which he said that an introduction, under the circumstances of the case in point, where an advantage resulted, ought to be worth something substantial, and he considered that 5 per cent would be about right.

STUDENT CHEATED; REFUSED DIPLOMA

Young Men of Medical College Hold Indignation Meeting.

Because one of their schoolmates was caught cheating at an examination, and because the faculty has refused the young man a diploma, the students of the College of Physicians and Surgeons are most indignant.

The examination on medical jurisprudence was held 10 days ago, and only 25 per cent was allowed. Prof. George Safford saw one of the students looking over another's shoulder. He reported his discovery to the faculty and the embryonic doctor was brought before the faculty, to whom he confessed.

It was decided to keep the matter quiet, so Prof. Safford simply gave the student zero, which brought his percentage in all his studies below 70 percent, the required mark. It also was announced that he would not receive his diploma on commencement day, April 25, because he had failed.

The news leaked out, however, and the students held an indignation meeting. "Just think of it," said one to a Post-Dispatch reporter. "Why, there is not a fellow in the college who wouldn't try to get a note or two that way. And he is singled out."

Saturday the student appealed to Dr. Waldo Briggs, president of the college, to overlook his offense. Dr. Briggs refused. Afterward the president said to the reporter:

"I hated to do it and it was the first experience of the kind I have had in my ten years' connection with the college. But I have been aware that cheating was going on, and I decided that it was time to put a stop to it. This young fellow was simply unfortunate in being caught."

BROCKMEIER IS BACK IN HOSPITAL

Man Recently Shot by His Child-Bride Engages in Fight at His Home.

Not fully recovered from a gunshot wound inflicted by his child bride, Ben Brockmeier of 3156 North Fourteenth street is again a prisoner at the City Hospital. He, with three others, was arrested after a general fight following an alleged insult to Mrs. Brockmeier.

Counter charges of disturbing the peace were preferred against Charles Braatz of 4225 North Levee, who is suffering from a severe scalp wound, and Ben Brockmeier, George Sutorius and Henry Riemenschneider, all of 3156 North Fourteenth street. They will be arraigned in the Dayton Street Police Court Monday.

Braatz applied for treatment at the North End Dispensary, but was sent to the Central Dispensary because of the seriousness of his injury. When he was later transferred to the North Market Street Police Station, he found Brockmeyer, Sutorius and Riemenschneider there as prisoners.

It was said that Brockmeier objected to Braatz, who is a saloon keeper, bringing beer to his wife. In the argument which followed Sutorius and Braatz came to blows. Braatz admits drawing a revolver, which was taken away from him. He was knocked down by the three men and received his injury in the fall. He told conflicting stories of having lost $250 in the melee and later said that his wife, who was with him, had taken the money.

Mrs. Brockmeier, Mrs. Braatz, Mrs. Sutorius and Mrs. Riemenschneider were witnesses to the encounter in the Brockmeyer home. The noise of the fight attracted the police and the arrests followed.

Brockmeier was sent to the City Hospital because the old wound received at the hands of his wife, had opened from the excitement of the fray. He is in a serious condition, as the bullet in his abdomen had never been extracted.

STATE TAKES HOLD OF HOME CO-OPERATIVE

HAS ASSETS OF $200,000

Receiver Was Named Last August on Complaint of Contract Holder.

Judge McElhinney in the Circuit Court at Clayton appointed William L. Watkins, Missouri Supervisor of Building and Loan Associations, receiver for the Home Co-Operative Co., a St. Louis and Kansas City concern, with assets amounting to $200,000.

The Home Co-Operative Co. was organized at Kansas City in 1901. Its announced purpose was to provide for the building of homes on the installment plan. Those subscribing to the scheme were required to pay $50 per month into the treasury until the amount reached $1000. When this latter sum had been paid in the company agreed to build the contract holder a home, giving him a deed of trust thereon for $1000.

Judge McElhinney's action today followed litigation relative to the company's business that has been in progress since July 3, 1905. On that date Herman H. Wehrs, one of the contract holders, filed suit against William B. Sullivan, who obtained control of a majority of the stock of the Home Co-Operative Co., in 1902, alleging that the concern was insolvent and unable to meet its obligations.

Subsequently the petition filed by Wehrs was supplemented by a number of other contract holders residing in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri.

Judge McElhinney, Aug. 3, 1905, named Francis A. Tillman receiver of the company and he is in charge of its affairs at the present time.

On March 26, 1906, State Supervisor Watkins filed an interplea, asking the Court to place the affairs of the Home Co-Operative Co. in charge of his department.

Judge McElhinney granted this application this morning. The St. Louis offices of the Home Co-Operative Co., are in the De Menil Building.

BEER BOUGHT ON SUNDAY.

Angello Bottisi of 913 North Seventh street was fined $50 by Judge Kleiber in the Wyoming street court this morning for selling liquor on Sunday, April 8, and without a license.

Clerk Hogan of the Carr Street Station purchased two bottles of beer and paid 20 cents for them. Albert Wade, colored, of 912 Carr street, also testified that he bought two bottles of beer and paid 10 cents for them. Mike Lamb of 917 North Eighth street bought one bottle for 10 cents. About 54 cases of bottled beer were found by Officer Fox in a hallway adjoining the room. Clerk Hogan says he paid Jim Gometo, who was in the room at the time of the arrest, who in turn gave the money to Bottisi. Judge Kleiber, in fining Bottisi, said that Gometo was merely an employe of Bottisi.

NEARLY MILE OF WHARVES ADDED TO THE CITY'S RUINS

SAN FRANCISCO, April 21.—The fire which has devastated San Francisco proper last night leaped across Islais Creek and seized upon South San Francisco, a suburb. The skies were lighted by the flames from the burning residences throughout the night, and, according to a newspaper man who skirted the water front in a tug, the fires are still burning today.

The reporter states that everything, with the exception of four docks, has been swept clean from Fisherman's Wharf at the foot of Powell street to a point near the ferry, away to the west. This means that nearly a mile of grain sheds, docks and wharves have been added to the list of property destroyed.

It is difficult to estimate the number of dead, as bodies are scattered all over the city. Soldiers and citizens are burying them in trenches along the beach and putting 15 bodies in a ditch. The number of dead is estimated at from 1000 upward.

The three-story lodging house at Fifth and Minna streets, which collapsed, has already yielded over 75 dead bodies, and there are at least 50 other dead bodies exposed. Over 150 persons are reported lost in the Brunswick Hotel at Seventh and Mission streets. At least 100 lives were lost in the Cosmopolitan on Fourth street.

A strong wind last night rekindled downtown flames and a sea of fire started rolling down Market street toward the Oakland ferry, sending weakened structures crashing to the ground. Soldiers and firemen fought the flames and stayed them three blocks from the ferry house. Today the wind has died down and several warships and tugs are pouring water from the bay on the fire.

FUNSTON FEARS MUCH SICKNESS.

The following dispatch from Gen. Funston regarding conditions in general was sent to the War Department this morning from the naval training station:

"Fire is making no progress to the west from Van Ness avenue. West wind of considerable force now beginning. Indications now that all that part of the city east of Van Ness avenue and north of the bay will be destroyed. Some considerable apprehension is felt as to the post of Fort Mason, but it is believed that we can save it.

"Weather continues fine and warm. Practically no suffering from cold. It will be impossible to at once establish proper sanitary conditions. Much sickness must necessarily be expected. If the city to the west now standing remains intact, there are many good buildings that can be used as hospitals. The water supply is encouraging. The Spring Valley water people believe that they can deliver from 10 to 12 million gallons daily. This, with other sources not mentioned, will prevent a water famine."

According to newspaper men who have made the rounds of the refugee camps, smallpox and typhoid fever have broken out among the fugitives. A staff writer on the Examiner, who visited Jefferson Square and the Park Panhandle late last night, says cases have been found in both districts.

FORT MASON SAVED BY DESPERATE WORK.

Mayor Schmitz and Gen. Funston have established headquarters at Fort Mason, which was saved by some desperate work on the part of the soldiers, aided by a body of sailors from the warship Chicago. The records in the Hall of Records have been unharmed, which will prevent any tangle in titles.

Relief contributions have begun to flow into San Francisco and are expended as fast as they are received. The committee has been notified that the contributions made thus far reach the enormous total of $5,192,000.

Eleven postal clerks have been taken from the debris of the Postoffice. All were thought to be dead, but it was found that, although they had been buried under the stones, every one was alive. They had been for three days without food or water. All the mail was saved.

A dispatch from San Rafael says: The town of Tomales is a pile of ruins. All of the large stores are flat. The Catholic church, a new stone structure, is also ruined. Many ranch houses and barns are down. Two children, Anita and Peter Couzza, were killed in a falling house about a mile from town.

Martial law prevails in San Francisco by order of President Roosevelt, and any man found in the streets may be pressed into service for any work required of him by the troops patrolling the city.

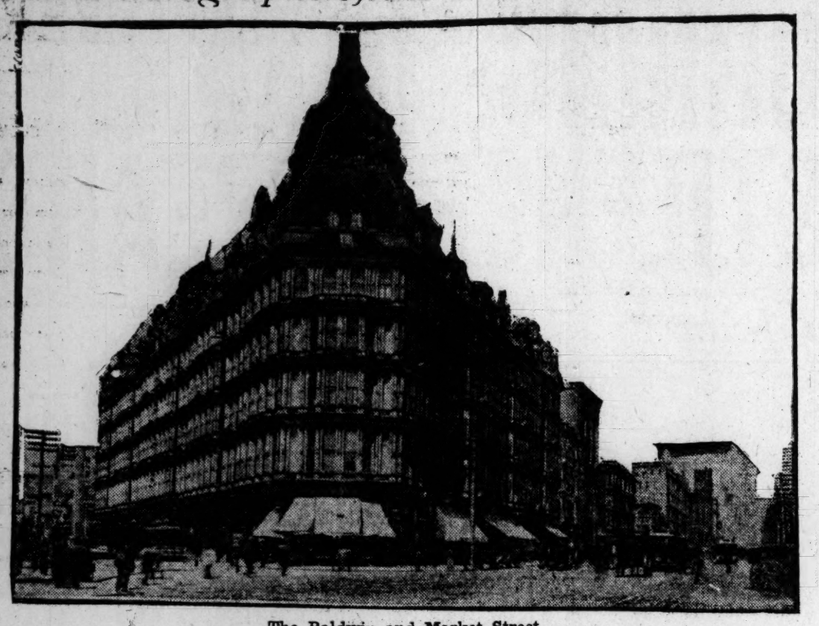

At a meeting of bankers at Oakland this morning M. S. Lynch of the First National Bank reported that a committee had examined all the bank and safe deposit vaults in San Francisco and found them all intact. This makes it certain that the money and papers on deposit are all safe.

REPORTER DRANK WATER FROM THE GUTTER, LOOTED GROCERY STORES

In Golden Gate Park are encamped 200,000 people. They are being taken care of. A huge supply station has been established there and provisions are being dealt out. Probably 100,000 more people are camped in vacant lots and squares scattered about the city, and these are the unfortunates that are hard to reach.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 21.—Harry C. Carr of the Times, the first Los Angeles newspaper man to get within the troop-patrolled limits of San Francisco and the only one to get back to Los Angeles, returned yesterday with a thrilling account of a day spent among the ruins of the devastated metropolis. Mr. Carr left Los Angeles on the morning of the earthquake, and, after exciting adventures, arrived at San Francisco the next day. His description follows:

By Harry C. Carr.

I am one of the hungry who robbed grocery stores for food, one of the parched thousands who eagerly drank water out of the gutter, the leakage from the fire engines. After hours of discouraging failure, of being turned back by the sentries with the sound of dynamited houses rining in my ears, I managed to join the long caravan of homeless families carrying in sheets all the property left to them in this world. Sometimes I walked with the daughter of a Van Ness millionaire, lugging a bundle over her shoulder, sometimes with a Chinaman, moaning piteously over the loss of his laundry.

Looking back over all that day of horrors, the most piteous and touching sights were women driven from their homes trying to make new homes in the parks out of a bit of torn blanket and a few boxes of patent breakfast food. Not a word of complaint and not a tear came from them. There was as much elation in families over a new box of looted sardines as there would have been days ago over the sudden acquisition of a fortune.

A chauffeur, who had been using his automobile all that morning taking medicines to the demolished insane asylum at Agnews, told me that scores of dead were lying stretched on the lawns and others were walking about hideously wounded. Amid this scene an insane woman was wandering, blithely singing little songs of her own composition.

One giant maniac had broken his shackles and rescued one of the guards from the burning building. He had one sane moment long enough to be a hero. Then he fled madly into the hills.

One of the first lot that I met was a little family beginning life over again. What they had been able to rescue before the flames came was packed in a little express wagon. The elderly husband was drawing these. Behind him came his wife. With the forethought of a woman, she had brought along two packages of breakfast food, and that stood between them and starvation. They looked drawn and anxious, and in this respect they were peculiar. Most of the refugees were cherful.

I saw a pretty "tailor-made girl" meeting her friends on the street. One of them had a little bundle of things in a handkerchief.

"That's all I have in the world," she said.

"That's nothing," said the other girl. "I haven't a rag to my back or a cent of money, and I've lost track of my family somewhere in this crowd."

"Oh, well, what's the use of worrying?" and with that they parted.

One touching little group I saw at sunrise the next morning was led by the father, who carried in a sheet a few articles. The young wife was dragging a child's express wagon, laden mostly with provisions. Behind her trooped two little girls. One was wrapped in a big shawl, from beneath which a kitten which she held in her arms was poking out its nose, protestingly. Bringing up the rear was the other little girl hugging a doll under each arm.

A fine-looking young fellow in khaki trousers and a fashionable coat was packing an enormous clothes bundle. His wife was clinging to his arm. It was all they had in the world, but both were going along in good spirits.

A little farther up the street a ravenous-looking young woman was cooking breakfast in the gutter. She wore a handsomely-made but torn skirt and a gold bracelet on one wrist. Her oven was made of two bricks and a toasting grill. A young man was bringing her bits of fine wood and they were consulting together over the frying of bacon.

BY L. E. STOVER, Resident San Francisco, Correspondent Post-Dispatch.

OAKLAND, Cal., April 21.—Never has a situation such as has confronted San Francisco been handled so superbly. There is little actual want in the city, although plenty of discomfort. The food supply is becoming ample, and the one source of suffering—the dearth of water—is being relieved. There is now plenty of water to drink, but as yet little for other purposes. The military has handled the situation in a manner that calls forth praise from even the despairing.

Yesterday and today quantities of supplies poured into the city from the army depots and nearby towns. These were conveyed to points where the refugees were camped and distributed free to the needy. This morning the great stores of army clothing were distributed. Throughout the refugee district notices are posted informing the populace that further relief is on the way. Army wagons distribute bread, biscuits and canned goods. There is enough and to spare for everyone in the vicinity of the supply stations.

As though to make amends for the dreadfulness of the preceding two days, the elements are dealing kindly with the sufferers. Thursday night was balmy. Scarcely a breeze stirred, and even those that had roofs to shelter them left their dwellings to sleep in the open. On the hills in the western part of the city thousands gathered between brief intervals of sleep to witness the completion of the destruction. Throughout Golden Gate Park 20,000 bivouac fires gleamed; in front of every remaining residence impromptu fireplaces were doing duty as stoves, and for the first time since the earthquake shock the people sat down on grass plots or curbstones to enjoy a warm meal.

CROWDS GOOD-NATURED.

Withal the crowds were good-natured—possibly the cheerfulness of despair. Here and there some person would start up a rollicking song. One heard little pessimism. It was as though, interested in the appalling and unequaled spectacle before them, the homeless hordes failed to realize the full extent of the disaster and their own losses. For the time being they were out of want; the future would engage their attention after some sort of order had come out of the chaos in the burned district.

Only Thursday the military had taken charge of every stock of supplies remaining in the city and was distributing them to the crowds. Dealers in goods not classed as necessities, such as tobacco, furniture and the like, were permitted to continue their sales with the understanding that there should be no raising of prices. Whenever a dealer violated this rule his stock was promptly confiscated and distributed free. The best of order was maintained everywhere; the military had the situation under perfect control. At least a dozen men have been shot by soldiers for looting and in two cases thieves were run through with bayonets and their bodies left lying where they had fallen, to become food for the oncoming flames.

At one place on Thursday five men were shot and two were killed. The troops had thrown open a grocery store with the general order that the crowd might carry off all it contained except the liquors. A large party of men made a rush for the place and emerged with quantities of whisky. When called upon to drop them they failed to obey and a volley was fired upon them.

No mercy was shown those that defied calls to halt. The rifle was leveled with the first order, and at the failure of the second command to stop the offender it was discharged. Undoubtedly the troops saved a lot of lives by keeping the burned district free of crowds, where buildings were constantly falling.

Out in the Golden Gate Park, where the number of refugees is now close to 200,000, the situation is democratic in the extreme. Hobnobbing side by side may be seen millionaires and day laborers, State and city officials, and members of the judiciary, eating out of the same tureen with the lowliest of the city people. Money counts for nothing. All that it would purchase for its possessor was good transportation facilities for the little that was saved from the rich man's home. The food supplies were as free for the pauper as for the Croesus; there was nothing for the one that the other could not have. Throughout it all the best of comradeship prevailed. For the first time class lines were completely blotted out.

SANITARY PROBLEM.

Some of the household utensils in use are primitive in the extreme. For the most part the cooking range consists of some flat pieces of iron, laid upon walls of bricks. Here and there a chafing dish is in use. Every manner of kettle and pot has been pressed into service.

The sanitary problem is still the one that gives most concern. This may be solved, in a measure, as soon as the soldiers are enabled to leave the burned area and devote their attention to restoring some system of living. Already considerable sickness has developed because of the exposure and absence of anything but a canned goods diet. Now that supplies are coming in the situation will be alleviated.

The extent of the loss of life will never be known. The police now estimate the dead at 700. However, an army officer, who had charge of the mission district, said today:

"I don't want to exaggerate a situation that is already horrible enough, but it is my honest opinion that 10,000 would be near the correct figures of the dead. In the Mission district long rows of flats were leveled. Beneath them were scores of crushed bodies. Before the work of rescue could be more than begun the flames came and swept through the ruins.

"I know of one large flat having from 80 to 100 persons, from which not one was seen to emerge. The entire building crashed into the basement, so completely wrecking it that the debris scarcely extended above the level of the ground."

One horrible incident was witnessed by MacKenzie Gordon, a singer, from his window in the Victoria Hotel. Gordon leaped out of bed as soon as the shock commenced. Just as the last tremor had ceased he saw a window raised in the seven-story apartment house opposite, and a naked man leaped from it. At the fourth floor the man's leg caught in the fire escape and was torn out at the hip. The body crashed on the pavement below.

No estimate of the number of the injured can be given at this time. There are fully 5000 who have sustained wounds of different stages of severity.

Five firemen were crushed to death Wednesday night while fighting the flames. They were caught beneath the debris in a building.

At midnight Wednesday 20 persons were imprisoned in an apartment house. The firemen cut through the walls with their axes, determined, if possible, to rescue the imprisoned people. A hole big enough to permit the passage of a man was cut and R. Durie, a San Francisco fireman, reached his arm through and was assisting a young girl to safety when the roof of the structure collapsed. Durie escaped with his life, but the 30 imprisoned lodgers were killed. Fire Chief Sullivan, who was injured Tuesday morning, is still alive. His wife died Thursday afternoon.

UNIVERSITY IN RUINS.

Stanford University is in ruins, three are dead and the town of Palo Alto is badly damaged. The loss in money is conservatively estimated at between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

The work of years was destroyed in a few seconds. The famous chapel, which was erected but two or three years ago and whose facade was covered with Mosaic which attracted the attention of the art lovers of the world, is a pile of rocks. The mosaic itself was disintegrated into innumerable fragments whose only purpose was to amuse the souvenir collectors.

The magnificent arch, the entrance to the university grounds, an architectural triumph, now is leveled to the ground. Many of the dormintory buildings were badly damaged or completely demolished and it is considered remarkable that the list of casualties was limited to so small a number. Only two of the dead were students.

All of the fraternity buildings were destroyed and for hundreds of yards the outer quadrangle has been razed. The library building is demolished. The tall chimney of the engineering house toppled at the height of the shock and fell, crushing the engineer, whose name was Curtis. The falling debris in the dormitories killed Junius Hanha, a sophomore, and another student, and injured a score of others.

The famous Japanese collection in the museum was almost totally wrecked and the museum building itself was badly damaged, as were the new chemistry and gymnasium buildings. Roble Hall, the room in which Miss Ruth Blodgett, a student from Bakersfield, was sleeping, fell three floors, but the young woman escaped without injury.

President Jordan declares that the earthquake was due to the folding of the nearby mountain ranges.

Damage to the town was not so severe, but many stores and residences were wrecked. It is declared that the damage in Redwood City and San Mateo has been very heavy, although no particulars are obtainable.

FRISCO SURVIVORS DESCRIBE THRILLING ESCAPES FROM DEATH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 21.—The first refugees who have arrived from San Francisco tell harrowing tales. Henry Hahn, a wholesale grocer of this city, occupied a room on the second floor of the Palace Hotel. He was awakened by the first shock and found himself covered with plaster and broken glass, but escaped without a scratch.

"I will never forget that horrible grating sound when the building swayed and rocked like a tall tree in a storm," he said.

"It was something awful. I was awakened by the first shock and immediately the plaster began to fall. The bureau and bed were shifted almost to the middle of the room. While I did not seem to realize that I was in great danger, I got out of the room when the second, third and fourth shocks followed, although they were less severe.

"The damage in the building, however, was nothing compared with the scenes that met our eyes upon reaching the street. Great heaps of brick and timbers were strewn about to the middle of the pavements, and it was impossible to get away except by taking to the middle of the streets. In some places the streets had sunk to a depth of a foot or more. Within half an hour 20 of the fallen structures were ablaze.

"I saw two bodies, one of which was lying on the sidewalk, and the other under the timbers of a fallen building. Many maimed and crippled were rushing about the streets, apparently dazed and not knowing in which direction to seek relief. There were any number of dead horses on the streets when we tried to reach the ferry. They belonged to hawkers, who are out early in the mornings, and they had been crushed by crumbling walls. What became of their owners I do not know.

"We had an awful time getting to the ferry. The streets were soon blockaded, and the only way to reach the Washington street pier was by taking a circuitous route. I crossed on the first boat, and the rush was not as frantic as it was later on."

H. D. Kent, a traveling man from Seattle, occupied a room in the Palace Hotel. He said:

RAIN OF PLASTER.

"I was awakened from a sound sleep by the most terrific shock that could be imagined. Plaster fell like rain, and it seemed as if the entire building would collapse. People rushed down to the great corridor below, some scantily attired, some in pajamas and others even not that well clothed. In the lobby everything was confusion. Women and children who carried wearing apparel in their arms commenced to clothe themselves, but hardly any attention was paid to any of them. It looked like everyone for himself. After the first few minutes everyone was apparently aware of what had happened, and the wildest confusion followed.

"Among the hundreds that were quartered in the Palace Hotel were members of the Conried Opera company, all of whom seemed more panic-stricken than others. I could not understand exactly what was said, as they spoke in French, but if gesticulations could speak, I could come pretty near guessing every word that passed between them. The men and women of the company were rushing about the lobby in their night clothes, gesticulating wildly.

"The greatest amount of damage at that time appeared to be in the downtown districts and along the water front. I noticed one woman, apparently more than 80 years old, crawling alongthe sidewalk with blood streaming from her head and her clothing almost torn from her body. This is only one of numerous shocking things observed while on my way to the ferry. Before I left the city I believe that I could have counted more than a score of fires, which seemed to break out in every direction. A small blaze, not larger than a hat, would appear in the lower floor of a frame building, and in an instant the structure would be a mass of fire. Everything appeared to burn like tinder, and I am not surprised to learn that fire has devastated the entire city."

A. H. Hendricks of La Grande, who, with his wife, was at the Winchester Hotel at the beginning of the catastrophe, said:

WOMAN LEAPS TO DEATH.

"My wife and I had a room at the Winchester. We were awakened by falling plaster and the noise and motion of the shock. Before we left the bed we were completely covered with laths and plaster. As we left our room and started for the street in our night clothes the body of a woman fell to the bottom of the elevator shaft, which was near our room. The elevator was running and taking out the inmates of the hotel. It was at the floor above the woman, and she had evidently been so terrified that she had jumped into the shaft without waiting for it to come down. Two men stopped and dragged out her body as we passed by.

"After gaining the street I returned to recover a diamond necklace which my wife had left. By the time I reached the room the ceiling had fallen in, but I managed to move aside the debris and get the necklace. We dressed hurriedly in the street, as did the other occupants of the hotels, and most of those whom we saw come out of the otherbuildings and started for the ferry.

"I saw one or two dead bodies in the street and noticed men carrying bodies out of a restaurant back of the Call Building. Several automobiles passed by upon which bodies had been hurriedly stacked as if they were cordwood. Buildings had collapsed on all sides and those which were still standing were wrecked beyond any possibility of repair."

GHOULS CUT OFF WOMAN'S FINGERS.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 21.—A. J. Neve, formerly of this city and who, at the time of the earthquake, was manager of one of the Owl drug stores in San Francisco, is in Sacramento. Mr. Neve said:

"The work of the ghouls—worse than murderers—was the thing that added rage to discouragement and despair. Hundreds of women were crowded into the St. Francis Hotel, it being believed that it could withstand the flames. The building burned on all sides of it and then it caught. The women were carried out and the villains cut off their fingers and put them in their pockets to secure the diamonds.

"There was one consolation the men caught at this work were shot without a question. Many of them were killed. Wherever men were found robbing dead bodies they were shot down. In the pocket of one who paid the penalty with his life there were five diamond rings that had been stripped from the fingers of the dead.

"The soldiers, worn out and thirsty, broke into saloons to get water or liquor to brace them up. Many of them got drunk, and the result was that they shot many innocent people. That is the simple truth. And yet the soldiers are not all to blame. They are on constant duty and are worn out. They have enough food, but no water. The militia of the states should be rushed to San Francisco to relieve those who have so long been on guard."

SALT LAKE FIREMAN'S ESCAPE.

SALT LAKE, Utah, April 21.—Terrence Owens, Chief of the Fire Department, is a survivor of the San Francisco earthquake. The Chief, with his wife and young son, arrived here today. They were guests at the Grand Hotel in San Francisco on the morning of the earthquake, and after the first shocks escaped to Oakland.

"I happened to be awake when the first shock came," said the Chief. "The plaster began to come down around us, and the furniture of the room was thrown about.

"My wife sprang up from the bed and a moment after she had quit it a heavy dresser was thrown violently upon it. It surely would have killed her had she remained there. I quickly got my wife and child to the street. Returning, I got our things together and took them down where my wife was. I saw fire burst out a few blocks away. An engine came down and hitched to a hydrant, but seemed to be doing nothing. I asked the engineer what was the matter, and he said there was no water.

"I saw enough in those minutes to convince me that the city was doomed. I made my way back to my wife and got away. She wanted to go out to Golden Gate Park, but I told her that I believed the city was going and that we must get to Oakland. We managed to catch the first boat and got over and saw the rest of the fire from a distance.

SCENE OF MAD CONFUSION.

"Market street, when we got out of the hotel, was in a frightful state. Wires were down, naked and half naked men and women were running about the street, cattle and horses were mixed up with the crowd and the scene was one of terrible confusion. The air seemed to be a sort of bluish yellow. To make matters worse, there was the most peculiar smell in the air. Then the buildings were leaning together in a crazy fashion and debris was falling everywhere. I knew when the water was gone that the city was gone.

"I distinctly felt two heavy shocks before we left for Oakland, and after we got over to the Oakland side there were two more. As we left the Frisco side I could see fire in all directions. People whom we met had come many blocks running to the water front, half naked and with bare feet. By that time it was no easy matter to get through the street for the stuff thrown about by the shock. The sight was the most horrible I ever witnessed, and I have seen many fires. Some we met were cut about the face and hands by falling glass or windows, and others had been hit by stones. None of them seemed to know where they were going, but ran about in every direction."

RELIEF TRAINS AND SHIPS.

Advices from many points indicate that at least 150 freight cars loaded with the necessaries so awaited in San Francisco are speeding there as fast as steam can drive them. In addition, several steamers from other Pacific Coast points, all food-laden, are rushing toward the stricken city.

The rapidity with which the various relief funds in this city have grown is almost magical.

Well-known actors sold newspapers in the streets. George Cohan raised $1600 in this way and added his personal check for $1000. Weber Music Hall people have opened a store where hats, ties, pianos and other things are being sold. The stars, led by Marie Dressler, are the saleswomen, and the chorus girls are the cashgirls. The Willie Boy who goes near is held up and robbed. Fifty-cent ties are going for $5, and then turned back to be sold again. All the theaters give benefits, and at the Hippodrome two big performances under Mrs. Herman Oelrich's management will be given today. Already $600 has been paid for tickets.

GALVESTON GIVES AID.

Texans are giving to the San Francisco sufferers with a will. In Houston the Post has already raised $7300 and other funds will swell the total to $10,000, with further contributions to come. General calls for contributions have been made by secret societies and the Catholic bishops, several thousand dollars having already been sent. The city of Galveston has wired $1000 and has raised $3500 toward a fund of $10,000. Every city and most of the towns have raised funds, and reports show that Texans have already raised nearly or quite $100,000 for the sufferers.

FIRE WIPES OUT TWO BIG TOWNS IN THE PHILIPPINES

MANILA, April 21.—Two towns in the Philippines have been wiped out by fire and many thousands are homeless.

Fire swept the town of Mariquina, in Rizal Province. Many thousands of persons are homeless and starving. Two thousand dwellings are in ruins. The Government is rushing assistance to the sufferers.

Fire also destroyed Pasil, near the town of Cebu. Two hundred dwellings were burned and many persons are homeless.

Five Babies Born in Golden Gate Park Refuge Camp.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 21.—Five women refugees from the fire, camped in Golden Gate Park, became mothers yesterday.

Reports of babies being born in refuge camps in other parts of the devastated city were frequently received.

GOV. FOLK FINDS MANY OBJECTIONS TO EXTRA SESSION

Senators and Representatives, Interviewed by the Post-Dispatch, Almost Unanimously Favor State Ppropriation to Relieve Distress in San Francisco.

ATTORNEY GENERAL'S OFFICE SEES NO BAR

State's Law Officers Deny Chief Executive's Contention That Vacancies in Legislature Must Be Filled Before Assembly Can Be Called to Meet.

The Post-Dispatch suggested Friday that Gov. Folk convene the Legislature in extra session for the one purpose of appropriating relief funds for the San Francisco sufferers.

Such a session need not, if parliamentary proceedings were expedited, occupy more than three days, at an approximate cost to the State of $5000.

Gov. Folk would not state Saturday morning definitely whether or not he would call a special session, though he indicated that it is practically a certainty that no special session will be called.

The Governor is of the opinion that money will be subscribed liberally by the citizens of the various cities and towns and by commercial organizations, and that the greatest amount the Legislature could appropriate would not justify the calling of the Legislature in extraordinary session. Under the Constitution the appropriation, he said, would be limited to $200,000.

There is a restriction on legislative appropriations, though an exception is made in cases of "public calamities."

Governor Is Doubtful.

Upon the Governor thinks there is some distinction as to whether the constitution means public calamities in this State or elsewhere, and he thinks there is some doubt that the Legislature could legally appropriate any money for this purpose outside the State.

To call a special session, the Governor thinks, would take nearly a month, as there are 10 vacancies which it would first be necessary to fill by election. He also figures that the cost would reach nearly $100,000.

He does not give details on this estimate.

St. Louis attorneys interviewed have been unable to find in the Constitution or statutes any provision prohibiting the Governor from calling an extra session because of vacancies.

Attorney-General Sees No Bar.

That there is nothing in the Constitution or Statutes of Missouri requiring that vacancies in the Legislature must be filled before a special session can be convened is also the opinion given a Post-Dispatch reporter in Jefferson City Saturday by one of the assistants to Attorney-General Hadley. The Attorney-General himself is still sick.

After searching the Constitution and Statutes, the Assistant Attorney-General said he was unable to find any section requiring special elections to be called to fill vacancies, as is contended by Gov. Folk. He also expressed the opinion that so long as three-fourths of the membership of the Legislature was still holding office, the Legislature could be convened by the Governor and legislation enacted.

The statutes provide that when the Governor receives a resignation he shall immediately have a special election called to fill the vacancy. Although Gov. Folk has received notice of 10 resignations from members of the Legislature in the last year, and these resignations have been accepted, Gov. Folk has called no elections to fill the vacancies.

He expressed himself as being heartily in favor of anything which could be done to relieve suffering there, but indicated that the amount the State could appropriate in any event would be so small and would come at such a late date that it would be no more than a drop in the bucket.

However, he urges that there be no delay in the different towns and cities in subscribing to the fund being gathered to assist in relieving the immediate distress.

Legislators Interviewed.

The Post-Dispatch has obtained the views of prominent members of the Missouri Legislature as to their personal attitude and as to the feeling of their constituents on the subject of an extra session of the General Assembly to make an appropriation for the relief of the victims of the San Francisco catastrophe, now conceded to be one of the most far-reaching the world has ever known.

Out of 33 replies received, 30 are heartily in favor of a special session. Only three doubt the wisdom of calling the Legislature in extraordinary session for this purpose.

Some of the legislators not only approve the idea, but offer to contribute their salaries, due from the State during the extra session, to the San Francisco sufferers.

Would Cost Only $5000.

It is conservatively estimated that the expenses incidental to a special session of the Missouri General Assembly would not exceed $1200 a day. If devoted solely to the enactment of a special appropriation bill to provide relief for the victims of the San Francisco horror, the session could finish its business inside of three days.

The Forty-third General Assembly entailed a total cost of $300,000. This included the hire of 300 clerks and the printing of 1400 bills, two items amounting together to $100,000. St. Louis members of the Legislature say that a dozen clerks could attend to the copying, engrossing and enrolling of one bill at a cost of only a few hundred dollars.

At the outside it is figured that the legislators could pass a relief bill at an expenditure of less than $5000.

It is pointed out that Missouri has at the present time a surplus in its treasury exceeding $3,000,000. The State is free from debts. Its finances, in fact, are said to be in a more excellent condition than those of any commonwealth in the Union.

State Senator Thomas E. Kinney: This is the first opportunity Missouri has ever had of showing the world that it is a really great and imperial State. I don't know just what the constitution says on this subject, but as for me, I don't need any law to a good turn for a friend. We shouldn't quibble about this matter. What we need is action and prompt action. If I were Governor of the State, a call for a special session of the Legislature would have been issued before now.

I am sure Gov. Folk appreciates the situation. It would cost a comparatively insignificant sum to get the members together for a few days. Wouldn't it be fine, too, to see the Legislature in session without politics injected into its deliberations?

I would favor an appropriation of $200,000 for the victims of the San Francisco horror. We have several millions lying idle in the treasury, the State is free of bonded debt and there is really nothing in the way of Missouri responding liberally to this proposition.

"It is no answer to say that the Legislature has never been convened in extraordinary session to take up a mighty charitable cause.

We have never seen anything like this San Francisco disaster. Because other states don't happen to call their legislatures together is, in my judgment, the very best reason why Missouri should take the lead.

Missouri would win the everlasting gratitude of the American people, but particularly of her Western and Southwestern states if her administration and her Legislature rises to the opportunity now presented.

Baumann Says Cost Small.

State Senator Edward H. Baumann: The people of San Francisco have my deepest sympathy and I favor calling a special session of the Legislature to provide means for their relief.

St. Louis will contribute nobly, no doubt, but what we want is for the State to respond to its opportunity. I think Gov. Folk would make no mistake in calling the Legislature for this purpose, which could be accomplished at slight expense inside of a few days.

Gives Missouri Great Chance.

State Senator George Reichmann: Put me down in favor of the extra session proposition. Missouri should certainly respond to California's appeal for aid.

Was ever a better chance presented to a State to do a more creditable and noteworthy thing?

Thinks People Would Approve.

State Senator W. B. Kinealy: I am in favor of any movement that will afford aid to the stricken people of San Francisco. If Gov. Folk should see fit to call a special session I have no doubt his decision would meet with the hearty approbation of the people of Missouri.

Would Give His Per Diem.

State Senator John Sartorious: "It appears the disaster extends beyond the confines of San Francisco and is not merely a State, but a national calamity. Missouri should do something—even if we are to set a precedent for other states.

I am ready to start for Jefferson City tomorrow if the call for the extra session should then be issued.

Let's send the greetings of Missouri to Frisco and give her $75,000 or $100,000. There is nothing like a good financial friend in the hour of need.

Personally I am willing to give my salary as a legislator for the time we would be in session to the cause; also the amount that would be due me from the State for railroad fare.

I believe, in fact, that two-thirds of the Legislature would be in favor of doing likewise.

Bohley for Special Session.

George E. Bohley, Sixth St. Louis Legislative District: I earnestly advocate calling a special session. The San Francisco disaster is the most terrible catastrophe of recent years.

It is up to Gov. Folk to call a special session. Missouri should lead the way and appropriate a sum in accord with the position which Missouri holds in the country.

Godfrey Says $250,00.

William Godfrey, Sixth St. Louis Legislative District: I believe that a special session of the Legislature should be called to help toward relieving the distress of the survivors of the Frisco cataclysm. Gov. Folk should call a special session of the Legislature, and do it quickly.

The Frisco tragedy is one of the most awful in history and it is up to Missouri to lead the way for the relief of the survivors. I am willing to give from my resources to aid a movement of this nature and I think that the State should appropriate at least $250,000 for the benefit of residents of Frisco.

Once the Most Hospitable.

Oliver K. Grace, Sixth St. Louis Legislative District: Gov. Folk should call a special session of the Legislature to consider at once methods of relieving the distress of the residents of Frisco.

It is the proper thing to do and I believe that Gov. Folk will take action in the matter at once. San Franciscans have been noted as the most hospitable people in the country and in its hour of woe Missourians should not be wanting.

Hilkerbaumer for Private Aid.

William Hilkerbaumer, Fifth St. Louis District:

"I doubt whether it would be advisable to call the Legislature in special session for this purpose. Again there is a question in my mind as to the right of the Legislature to appropriate money for the relief of the San Francisco victims.

In my judgment it would take at least six days to get such a bill through. Besides we may get enough by private subscriptions to avoid the necessity of calling the General Assembly in special session.

Would Send Workmen, Too.

Charles Schueddig, Second St. Louis District: Missouri should have a special session. Everybody wants to give; everybody wants to help. It goes straight home to all of us. In this way we all can help—and the Post-Dispatch deserves credit for thinking of a way in which we can make a united effort.

I don't know that such a thing was ever done before, but I don't believe there was ever such an occasion before. This case stands alone in its horror and suffering. I would be in favor, in addition, of the the State sending people to assist in the work of cleaning the wreckage away and getting the town ready to build again.

There will be an immense amount of this work to do, and they have little money out there to do things with. We have the laborers and could afford to pay them.

As to the amount to be appropriated, I think that should come up after we have met at Jefferson City, if an extra session is called. That is, perhaps, the proper place for it, and then, too, we will know more definitely by that time just what is needed.

I am deeply enough interested in this, for one, to serve without pay during the short session that would be necessary.

Voyles Supports Session.

David W. Voyles, Second St. Louis District: If Gov. Folk calls an extra session of the Legislature to consider an appropriation to help the San Francisco sufferers, and such an appropriation can be legally made, the measure will receive my hearty support.

The suffering of the people of San Francisco and that portion of the Pacific coast has affected me greatly, as it probably has everyone. It is so terrible that it appeals to the sympathy of the entire country.

Such action on the part of Missouri as that proposed is a move for humanity, and one, I believe, in accordance with the general sentiment of our people. It is a move in which Missouri, because of her standing and position, should lead.

Moberly Approves.

L. F. Moberly, King City: I approve of the suggestion of a special session to make an appropriation for the relief of the sufferers in the San Francisco earthquake and fire.

Missouri Can Afford It.

Newlin Conkling, Carrollton: I most certainly approve of an extra session for the purpose mentioned. We can afford it and we should help the people of San Francisco in their distress.

The people here, without exception, would approve a liberal appropriation.

Lafayette County Approves.

Glover Branch, Lexington: I heartily approve of an extra session for the relief of the people of San Francisco.

Missouri Should Lead.

T. R. R. Ely, Kennett: I favor whatever is necessary to relieve the distress at Frisco, and Missouri should be in the lead.

Dowell Favors Session.

E. A. Dowell, La Balle: I would approve of calling an extra session of the Legislature for the purpose stated.

Speaker Approves Plan.

David W. Hill, Speaker of the House, Poplar Bluff: I most heartily approve of the idea of the Governor relative to calling an extra session of the Legislature to aid San Francisco.

Osage County Approves.

Alfred A. Speer, Chamois: The people of my county will approve of a speedy and generous contribution from the great wealth of Missouri for the relief of the homeless people of San Francisco, leaving to the judgment of the Governor the question of calling an extra session of the Legislature for that purpose.

Won't Accept Any Pay.

W. J. Heathman, Huntsville: I am in favor of a special session, and believe the call will meet the approbation of every Missourian whose heart pulsates with sympathy for suffering humanity.

I believe, knowing as I do the magnanimous and sympathetic type of manhood that composed the Forty-third General Assembly, that the members will donate individually the amount of their salary for extra session, less actual expenses.

Missouri by all means should help the sufferers of the great San Francisco catastrophe.

Lieutenant-Governor Wants It.

Lieutenant-Governor J. C. McKinley, President of the Senate, Unionville: Our people with one voice speak in favor of State aid for the suffering in San Francisco.

Our Treasury Well Filled.

Senator J. W. Peck, Westboro: No greater duty could be done than for the Governor to call the Assembly together and let Missouri come to the relief of suffering humanity. The destruction of life and property at San Francisco is appalling. Out of a well-filled Treasury the State cannot do less than divide its abundance.

Thinks It Folk's Duty.

Frank R. Cook, West Plains: The stricken people of San Francisco need help and I sincerely believe it is the duty of Gov. Folk to call a special session for the one purpose of appropriating money for their relief.

Would Give Up His Pay.

M. E. Casey, Kansas City: I approve of your suggestion of the Governor calling a special session of the Legislature to appropriate funds for the relief of the suffering in California. I would willingly serve without mileage and per diem for this purpose.

Former Member Votes Aye.

Joseph Albus, St. Joseph: I have resigned as a member of the Legislature. However, I approve the calling of the Legislature in special session for the purpose of appropriating money to relieve the distress and suffering caused by the earthquake and fire in the State of California.

C. C. Dickinson Approves.

C. C. Dickinson, Clinton: I approve the plan of a special session to help in the relief of San Francisco if the call can be legally made.

Whitecotton Favors Heartily.

J. H. Whitecotton, Paris: I heartily favor calling an extra session of the Legislature to appropriate money for the relief of the unfortunate in California. Many of them are our own people. Let Missouri act at once as a State.

People Will Indorse It.

W. C. Biggs, Queen City: While ordinarily I am against putting the people of Missouri to the expense of an extra session of the Legislature I feel that an appropriation at this time for the relief of the stricken inhabitants of San Francisco should and will be indorsed by every citizen in the State.

Bittinger Indorses Plan.

J. L. Bittinger, St. Joseph: I approve of a special session and a liberal appropriation to San Francisco.

Kiefner for Appropriation.

Charles E. Kiefner, Perryville: I am in favor of an extra session for the purpose of appropriating money in aid of the sufferers in San Francisco.

Favors Mass Meetings.

E. E. Johnston, Sedalia: The Mayor of Sedalia has called a public mass meeting for tonight. At this meeting the people of Sedalia will do their whole duty. Similar meetings will be held all over Missouri. In my judgment Missouri's duty to San Francisco can be better performed in this way than by a special session of the Legislature."

Bothwell Does Not Oppose.

John H. Bothwell, Sedalia: The immediate relief needed at San Francisco should be ample before any legislative action could be possible. Such other aid may be proper when conditions are better known. Missouri should be generous, and I will not oppose a special session if it is thought wise.

Leaves It to Folk.

F. M. Hooten, Marshfield: I am willing to leave to Gov. Folk the question of an extra session to help the people of San Francisco.

Burch Opposes All Extras.

Walter Burch, Mexico: I am opposed to an extra session to aid San Francisco or for any other purpose. The people of Missouri will respond with personal contributions without entailing this unnecessary expense upon the State.

Says Private Aid Is Enough.

Wallace Crossley, Warrensburg: I believe Missourians will respond nobly to the call for help by private contributions. I do not favor an extra legislative session for that purpose.

EAR CAUGHT IN COGS.

Workman Severely Injured When Drawn Into Machinery.

Caught by the ear in the cogs of a shearing machine, George Bobring, a machinist, 19 years old, was terribly injured today. He was taken to the City Hospital, where his condition was pronounced critical.

Bobring is employed at the plant of the Ruemmelli-Dawley Manufacturing Co., 3900 Chouteau avenue. He was bending over his own machine, about to remove a piece of paper which had blown into it, when his left ear was caught in the cogs of the machine adjoining.

The ear was pulled off and Bobring's body was drawn down till his left breast and skin was torn off his breast, side and part of his back, as far as the spinal column.

ALTON SENDS $1000.

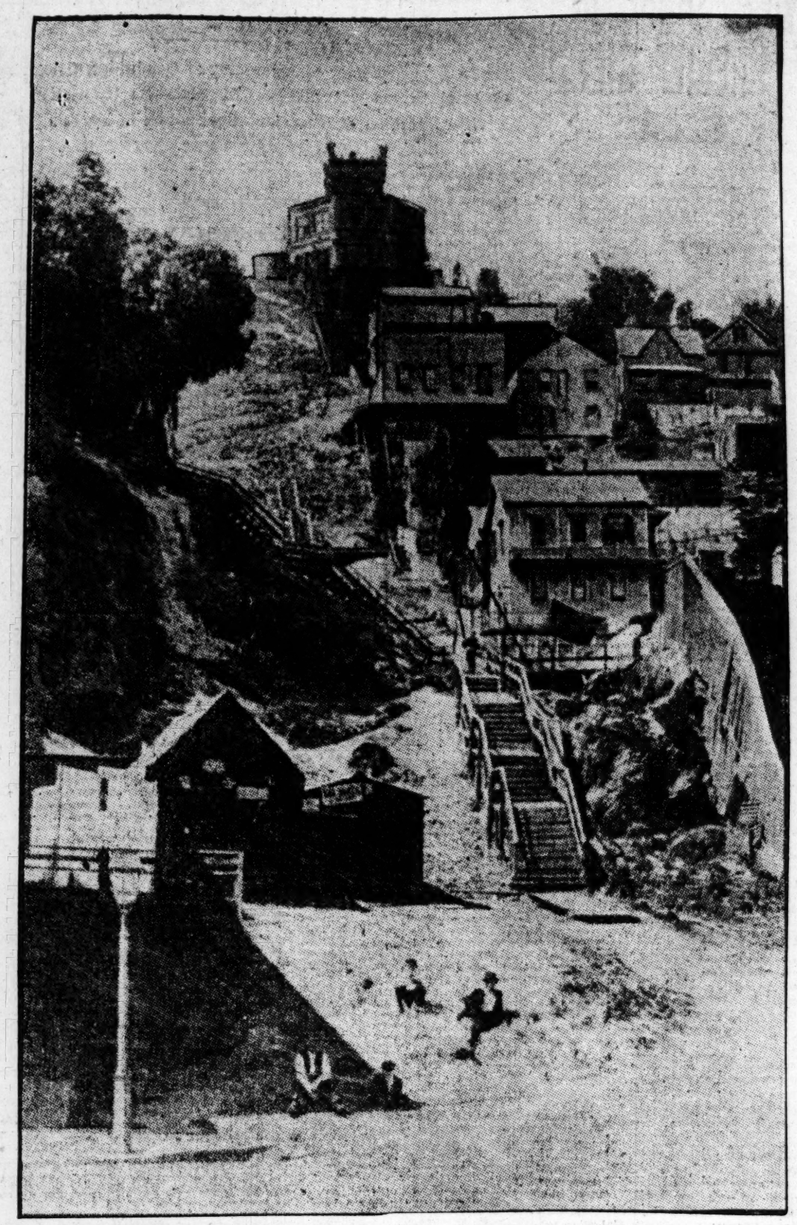

Jerseyville Appoints Committee to Raise Funds.

Mayor Beall of Alton telegraphed San Francisco that $1000 had been raised there, being partly contributed by the city and partly by religious, educational and business organizations.

Mayor Beall has called a public meeting to be held Sunday at 2 p. m. in the Temple Theater. The pastors of every church in the city have urged their congregations to be present and civic associations and the public generally will attend. Addresses will be made by Mayor Beall and other city officials.

The citizens of Jerseyville held a mass meeting Friday evening to appoint a committee for raising money. Mayor H. S. Daniels presided.

POST-DISPATCH COMMISSIONER IN SAN FRANCISCO SEEKING ST. LOUISANS AMONG SUFFERERS

Mr. Ben Blow Reached Stricken City at Noon Today and Began Work.

WILL REPORT AT ONCE

List of Missing Will Be Sent to Him and He Will Make Inquiries.

MESSAGES ARE DELAYED

Failure to Hear From Friends Does Not Mean They Are Injured.

A special commissioner from the Post-Dispatch is in San Francisco to find the St. Louisans who are refugees there and to telegraph information concerning them to the Post-Dispatch, for the benefit of their thousands of anxious friends and relatives in St. Louis.

The commissioner, Mr. Ben Blow, formerly of St. Louis and recently a newspaper man with the Los Angeles Herald, reached San Francisco at noon Saturday, and at once took up his work.

Telegraph Lines Better.

Greater activity was shown Saturday in the business of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies in St. Louis. During the earlier hours of the day both companies received and delivered a large number of personal messages from San Francisco direct to their friends in St. Louis. This business had been filed at the temporary offices of the telegraph companies on the yet undestroyed wharves of San Francisco.

In the local offices of both companies there were large crowds, Chinamen, Greeks and Italians being a part of the assembly. All were sending messages of inquiry and some were endeavoring to make arrangements for the transmission of money.

At the receiving office of the Postal company in the Merchants-Laclede Building, the local manager informed patrons that transmission of money by telegraph must be for the time by telegraph to banks at Sacramento or Los Angeles, to be transmitted from those points by special messenger to the individuals.

The local manager stated further that a number of operators had been sent from this city and Chicago to take the places of other operators who had been sent from relay points along the line between St. Louis and Denver to relieve the overworked men at Oakland and San Francisco, the efforts to re-establish business in San Francisco having reached the stage where more men will be provided with facilities for sending and receiving messages.

Manager Bohle of the Western Union company in St. Louis said placards had been placed in the streets of Frisco directing the people where telegrams might be received and sent. Both companies still are adhering to the rule of preference to business out of San Francisco to points in the East, and both companies will use either clerks, operators or other employes for re-establishing the delivery system as quickly as possible.

All in Need of Funds.

Every message that comes out of the city is accompanied by a request for immediate financial aid. Those St. Louisans who have been heard from escaped without exception only with their lives and what clothes they wore.

Albert A. Aal received a telegram from his son, Joseph, who owned a piano store in San Francisco, saying that his store and all his other property had been completely destroyed, and that he and his wife had escaped only with their lives. They were not able to save any clothing except what they wore.

Mr. Aal telegraphed his son money and received this message:

"Will start over."

Mrs. Douglas C. Boyer of 4040 Delmar boulevard and Miss Cornelius Scott of 3850 Westminster place were in the Palace Hotel the night of the earthquake.

A letter written by Mrs. Boyer Monday night has just been received by Mr. Boyer. She and Miss Scott were then members of a house party at the home of A. W. Foster in San Rafael, across the bay from San Francisco. The letter said that a party of nine was going over to hear Caruso sing in San Francisco Tuesday evening, and would spend the night in the Palace Hotel. Nothing has been heard from either since this letter.

Many St. Louisans and relatives of St. Louisans were in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake and only a few have been heard from.

Carl Anscheutz of 3449 St. Vincent avenue received a telegram from his son, William, reading:

"City wrecked. Am not hurt. Please wire $50."

Mr. Anschuetz sent the money Saturday. His son lived at 1512 Washington street in San Francisco.

Saved Only Their Clothing.

Members of the family of Charles Green in St. Louis received a telegram from Oakland saying that Mr. and Mrs. Green and their daughter Genevieve, who were stopping at the St. Francis Hotel, were safe in Oakland. The telegram said that all three were safe and well, but that they had lost all baggage and had nothing but the clothes they wore.

Mr. C. B. Woodward of the Woodward-Tiernan Printing Co. goes Sunday night to Frisco to find his daughter, who was in one of the principal hotels there and hasn't been heard from. He will gladly serve any St. Louisans who are in suspense by looking up relatives, delivering messages, etc.

Address him at Post-Dispatch office, stating particulars and desires as fully as possible, or at his home, 2709 Virginia avenue.

H. Walker, president of the H. Walker Furniture Co. of this city, Herman Well and wife of 4740 Easton avenue, and Mr. Well's nephew, Fred Gould, who were stopping at the Netherlands Hotel in San Francisco at the time of the earthquake, are now safe at Oakland. Mr. Walker is in California for his health.

Fred Gould is a son of the late E. A. Gould, who was St. Louis purchasing agent of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, and a cousin of George Gould. He was in St. Louis about a week ago on a visit to the local offices of the Missouri Pacific, but said nothing of an intended trip to the Pacific Coast.

ST. LOUIS NOT IN DANGER OF EARTHQUAKES

New Madrid District Is Protection for All the Rest of State.

SHOCKS LIKELY THERE

Father Borgmeyer, Geologist, Says Earthquakes Revisit Old Spots Weakened.

GREAT WAVES OF EARTH

Father Borgmeyer Describes Violence of Great New Madrid Earthquake.

Father Charles Borgmeyer, S. J., professor of geology at St. Louis University, said Friday to a Post-Dispatch reporter that he agreed with Prof. Cox of the Chicago Weather Bureau, who said that Missouri was in greater danger of being convulsed by an earthquake than any other interior State in the Union.

He added, however, that if an earthquake visited Missouri he thought it would be entirely confined to the southeastern corner and that St. Louis would be well out of the danger line and less likely to be seriously affected than any other city in the United States.

"No scientist can say," said Father Borgmeyer, "where or when the next earthquake will be. We know that where there has been an earthquake there is a strong probability that there will be another. Earthquakes seem to select certain localities, which they visit at intervals.

"This is easily explained. An earthquake cracks the earth's crusts and at that point makes it weak. Consequently when for some reason, volcanoes or otherwise, the earth's crust adjusts itself these weak places are the ones which give way in the earth's heaving.

"What was probably the most terrific earthquake that ever disturbed this country was at New Madrid in the extreme southeastern corner of Missouri in 1811. The story of this earthquake is familiar to all students of geology and seismic science. But it is not recorded on the lists of the world's great disasters, for the reason that at that time there were very few people there and no property of any value.

"And yet the earthquake was much more violent than the San Francisco or Charleston earthquakes.

"The earth was disturbed like the surface of the sea during a gale. Great heaving waves that rose in some places to the height of 10 feet traveled for a distance of several miles and some of the waves broke just as the water wave does and the earth was rolled over. Even now you can find traces of the great shock in the sunken ground of New Madrid.

"And instead of there being three or four shocks, the shocks were repeated at intervals during 20 days. In the affected territory there was not even a small frame cottage left standing.

"As a result, the strata in that neighborhood has been weakened. In fact, it is the opinion of scientists that way back in the first ages this territory was disturbed by a tremendous earthquake. If some internal disturbance of the earth took place near here which would result in the crust of the earth adjusting itself, the southeastern corner of Missouri would probably give in its weakened state.

"In this very fact lies the safety of St. Louis. Since there has been no earthquake here, at least as far as scientists know, the ground underneath St. Louis is not weakened and, having the weak ground in New Madrid so close, it would almost be a certainty that it would escape on the same principle of the lightning rod and the house."

HANLON FIGHTS JACKSON JOHNSON

man took the seat beside Mr. Johnson, who remained silent for a moment. Then he leaned over so as to attract Mr. Hanlon's attention.

"Please give me your business card before you get off," he said. "I presume of course you are from the stockyards."

"I've had enough of this!" Mr. Hanlon shouted, and leaped to his feet. Johnson did likewise, towering three inches above his adversary, his black mustache bristling. The two did not get within arm's reach of one another before half a dozen men interfered.

"Officer, Arrest That Man!"

Policeman Silverman took a hand at this point. He hurried up to the combatants.

"Arrest that man," cried Mr. Hanlon.

"He's not going to arrest me," said Mr. Johnson defiantly.

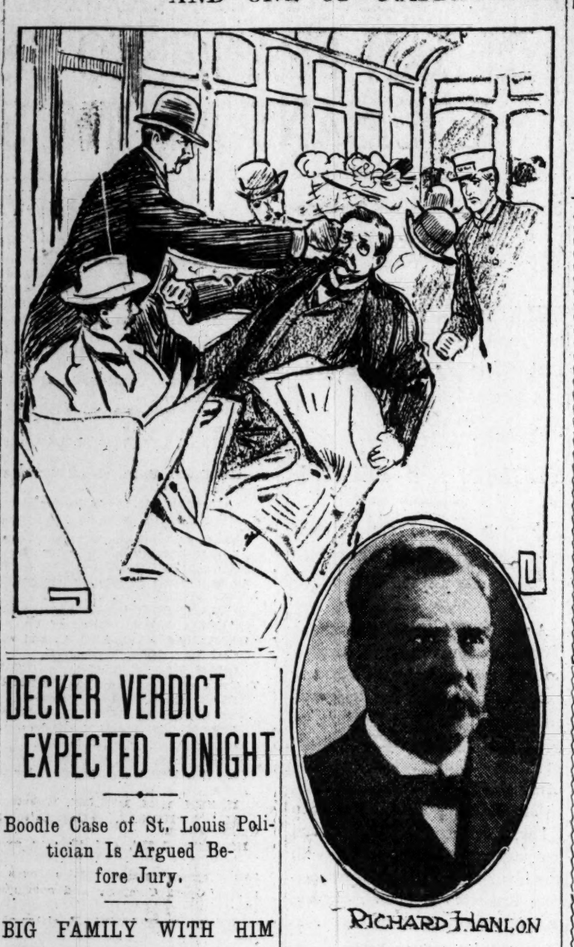

"If you don't come quickly with me I will have to take you off the car by force," said the policeman.

Mr. Johnson left the car with Silverman. They went to the Four Courts, where Mr. Johnson called for Acting Chief Gillaspy. The two were together half an hour. Then the Chief telephoned to Capt. Reynolds for some blank bonds. But they were not used, and Mr. Johnson was released unconditionally, the disturbance charge being erased.

Mr. Johnson is president of the Roberts, Johnson & Rand Shoe Co. Mr. Hanlon is president of the Hanlon Millinery Co., and a former member of the Board of Police Commissioners. By an odd coincidence Mr. Johnson, who is an ardent Folk man, was picked by the Governor to succeed Mr. Hanlon when the latter resigned from the board. Business reasons prevented him from accepting the appointment.

Mr. Hanlon lives at 4346 Cook avenue and Mr. Johnson at 4471 Washington boulevard.

DECKER VERDICT EXPECTED TONIGHT

Boodle Case of St. Louis Politician Is Argued Before Jury.

BIG FAMILY WITH HIM

Murrell and Stock Tell of Bribery to Handful of Hearers.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., April 21.—Arguments in the Louis Decker bribery case, here on a change of venue from St. Louis, were started in the Criminal Court. Prosecuting Attorney Patterson opened for the State. Each side is allowed three hours for argument.

The only testimony offered for the defense was in reference to the character of the defendant. The case will go to the jury late today and a verdict is expected tonight.

Circuit Attorney Sager expresses himself as confident of a conviction.

The State rested its case yesterday after John K. Murrell had testified. He related his part in the boodle "combine" in the House of Delegates, of which he was "business agent." He told how he had met Philip Stock, the Suburban's "legislative agent," and how they went to the Lincoln Trust Co. to deposit $75,000, which was to be paid the 19 members of the combine for their favorable votes on the Suburban bill.

Stock's testimony was correlative to that of Murrell. He told the bargainings between himself and Murrell as to the price for which the Suburban bill was to be passed, and said that, after refusing to pay more than $60,000, he finally agreed to pay $75,000, with the stipulation that the members of the combine were not to receive their money until the Mayor had signed the bill.

Neither Stock nor Murrell was a willing witness, but their stories were obtained in full under questioning by Circuit Attorney Sager. The people of Springfield showed little interest in the testimony, and not more than 50 persons were in the courtroom.

Mrs. Decker and six children sat with Decker in the courtroom all day.

SHEVLIN FIRED BY HOT SPRINGS

Lack of Funds Causes the Abolition of the Detective Bureau.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., April 21.—Chief of Detectives John W. Shevlin, formerly of the St. Louis Detective Department; Ray Gill, Superintendent of the Bertillon Bureau, and John Pettit, Record Clerk, were ousted from their positions and the City Detective Bureau was abolished by the City Council last night. Only the detectives working under Shevlin were retained. They will work as plain-clothes men.

This was one of the first acts of the new City Council and the measure was adopted by a vote of 9 to 2. The bureau was established four years ago by Shevlin. It has a fine equipment, rogues' gallery, instruments for Bertillon and finger-print identification system, and is said to be the best in the South.

The reason for the abolishment of the bureau is the city's financial condition, not a dollar being in the treasury.

SWITCHMAN KILLED.

Fell From Runing Board Under the Engine.

The body of Arthur Tatton, an Iron Mountain switchman, who was killed at Bixby, seven miles south of East St. Louis, was taken to the National Morgue at East St. Louis this morning. Tatton was on the running board of a swite hengine, and in some unexplained way fell and was run over by the engine. He was killed instantly.

Tatton was 22 years old, and his home was in Kansas City, where his mother lives. His brother from Joplin, Mo., has notified the authorities that he will claim the body.

raised in cash and subscriptions, and the first figure was raised to $3500. The real estate men believe now they will raise that amount.

Newspapers Give $2500.

Publishers of English and German papers in St. Louis held a meeting Friday afternoon at which the Post-Dispatch, Globe-Democrat and Republic contributed $666.66 each, the Westliche Post $300 and the Amerika $200.

President Julius Leser was in the chair Friday afternoon at a meeting of the Cotton Exchange, at which $535 was contributed.

The 37 banks and trust companies included in the St. Louis Clearing House Association contributed $25,261 at a meeting Friday. Two of these banks are in Granite City, three in East St. Louis and two in Alton. The money was given to the Central Relief Committee Saturday.

The Masonic organizations of St. Louis are planning to give a benefit at one of the local theaters during the coming week. The convention which was to have been held by the Mystic Shriners in Los Angeles has been abandoned, and $100,000 contributed by California cities will be returned. The Shriner parade will be one of the attractions at the benefit.

The theater managers of St. Louis, together with the managers of all traveling attractions in St. Louis next week, will combine in giving a mammoth benefit for the sufferers at the Olympic Theater next Thursday afternoon. Every company in the city will contribute talent to the benefit matinee, which, on account o fthe length of the program, will begin promptly at 1:30 o'clock.

Among the star attractions to be offered will be Marie Cahill of Nancy Brown fame; Paula Edwards, who is to appear in St. Louis next week in the Robyn Opera, Princess Beggar; Marshal P. Wilder and Lew Sully from the Columbia; Theodore Babcock, George Thatcher, Zenaide Williams and Florida Kingsley from "The County Chairman" company at the Century; Sidney Toler and a chorus from the Imperial; Nat Wills and chorus from "The Duke of Duluth" at the Grand; the German Stock company at the Odeon in a one-act German play, and vaudeville specialties from the Standard, Gayety and Havlins.

The orchestras of the Olympic, Garrick and Century Theaters will be combined, making a full orchestra of 40 pieces. Both Miss Cahill and Miss Edwardes will appear supported by their respective choruses. While Miss Edwardes is on the stage, the orchestra will be led by Composer Robyn.

Over 200 persons will take part in the performance.

The Lyric Amusement Co., lessees of Suburban Garden, whose regular season does not begin until Sunday afternoon, May 20, will give a benefit Sunday afternoon and night, April 29. The entire receipts are to be turned over to the Relief Fund Committee. The Great Western Printing Co. and the Gunning system are to contribute services and material free. The program is to be made up of acts on the city's leading vaudeville stages. Nobody connected with the theater or garden will receive compensation, the plan being to turn over every dollar taken at the box office at both performances. A large orchestra is being engaged.

Supplies Handled Free.

The Missouri Pacific and Burlington Railroads have given notice to Mayor Wells and the Business Men's League that they will transport, free of charge, all shipments of supplies for the relief of the sufferers.

Announcement to the same effect was made by the New York Central lines and the Southern Railway.

Gov. Folk issued a proclamation Saturday, urging that "out of their abundance Missourians give liberally." Mayors, commercial organizations and individuals are asked to contribute.

The Municipal Assembly of St. Louis adopted resolutions in both houses sympathizing with San Francisco. The law is such that the Assembly cannot appropriate money for relief.

The committee having charge of the entertainment and dance under the auspices of Empire Council, Legion of Honor, have decided to turn over the receipts of the dance to the relief fund. The dance will be given at Anchor Hall Wednesday night.

NOTED SCIENTIST EXPLAINS ORIGIN OF EARTHQUAKES

Sir Robert Ball, Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge, Comments on Frisco Disaster for the Post-Dispatch—No Connection With Eruption at Vesuvius—Contraction of Earth's Crust Primary Cause.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1906, by the Press Pub. Co. (New York World.)

LONDON, April 21.—Sir Robert S. Bell, Professor of Astronomy and Geometry at Cambridge University, and one of the most eminent living authorities on seismology, has given the following statemeht to the Post-Dispatch on the San Francisco disaster:

That the appalling catastrophe at San Francisco should have followed so closely on the great eruption of Vesuvius, naturally caused the question whether these two mighty terrestrial phenomena have any real physical connection.

I do not see how there can be any connection between these two events. The late Prof. O'Reilly pointed out how the great eruption at Krakatoa, Straits of Sunda, was situated at the antipodes of the northwest coast of South America, which has been perennially subjected to earthquake shocks. As another striking illustration of this view, he showed how, when Andalusia was shaken by earthquake, on Christmas, 1884, its antipodes in New Zealand became a year later the seat of violent earthquakes and volcanic outbreaks. Whether there is anything more in these notable instances than remarkable coincidences it is not necessary to inquire, for the simple reason that the antipodes are about 4000 miles from San Francisco.

Exposed to Seismic Activities.

The San Francisco region has long been exposed to assaults of seismic activities, but history does not tell us of tragedies entailing loss incalculable, and of which we are now hourly receiving the grim details. Indeed, on one of the mightiest of these events history is silent. It happened in prehistoric times, perhaps, rather in a remote geological period.

This great outbreak, however, left a monument which we may anticipate will endure even when in future times a rebuilt and more glorious San Francisco shall obliterate all traces of the present convulsions.

That a volcanic eruption should have taken place from the floor of the ocean is a fact of which many instances might be given. Perhaps the most striking cases are found in the floor of the Pacific stretching westward from California.

The magnitude that such eruptions may sometimes attain is best illustrated by the case of the Sandwich Islands. Here the Pacific Ocean was full three miles deep.

Once upon a time a volcanic eruption broke out and the internal volcanic movement upward was so vehement all three miles of water were inadequate to quench the fiery torrent from the bottom of the sea. Lava and other matter were ejected in such stupendous quantities that they accumulated into a mountain which gradually ran through the three miles of water, finally emerging and creating the Sandwich Islands.

Nor is that wonderful volcanic energy even yet exhausted. The formation of the Sandwich Islands has a parallel formation in many other Pacific islands.

Now we have another manifestation on a grand scale of the same kind, arising from the same agencies. This time, unhappily, the earthquake manifested itself as an agent of destruction, of tragedy unspeakable, while in the former case the same agents appeared in the entirely beneficent role of creators from amid the waste of waters of one of the most exquisite spots upon the globe.

Earth Must Slowly Shrink.

The earth, being a gradually cooling globe of incandescent material, covered by a crust of bad conducting rocks, has at every point of its surface a certain potentiality for these seismic displays, for as the earth slowly loses heat, so must it slowly shrink.

That shrinking is not done uniformly and steadily all over the surface. The shrinking is accomplished irregularly, now in one place, now in another. A slight slip takes place. This sends a tremor through the earth's crust, and if that tremor is a violent one we have an earthquake. Nor is it hard to account for the excessive violence of an earthquake as manifested in the overturning of buildings, even though the actual visible dislocation of the solid crust of the earth is insignificant. The origin of an earthquake is at considerable depth below the surface, say ten or twelve miles. The pressure at this depth, due merely to the weight of the superincumbent rocks and quite independent of earthquakes, must be about 30 or 40 tons to the square inch, equaling the pressure of exploding cordite on a hundred pound projectile when being driven out of a cannon at the moment of discharge.

It can well be imagined how extraordinary must be the violence, must be the disturbance, if the rocks on two sides of a fault, while being pressed together with forces like these, are sometimes compelled, as happens in the case of earthquakes, to slide more or less one over the other.

This starts vibrations of the solid crust of the earth which, in the vicinity of the disturbance, produce a rapid oscillatory movement which even if the extent be large is sufficient to overturn the most massive buildings. Apparently this adjustment of the globe to its gradually diminishing bulk must continue for a period impossible to estimate. Prof. Milne and other investigators have taught us that the great earthquakes which in tones of thunder command the attention of the whole world, are only the more conspicuous among the thrills by which the globe is agitated.

The smaller thrills, infinitesmal earthquakes, we have ever with us, for though our bodily sense may not be keen enough to appreciate them, they are continuously recorded by the delicate seismic instruments.

RELIEF WORK ON EAST SIDE BEGUN

Mayor Names a Committee to Make Active Canvass for Contributions.

The members of the committee of business men appointed by Mayor Cook of East St. Louis to solicit funds for the relief of the California earthquake sufferers, were furnished with proper credentials yesterday, and will meet in the Mayor's office Monday at 9 a. m. to begin work. All who were appointed have accepted and will leave their business temporarily until the fund is completed.

The committee is composed of the following, representing the intdustries and business interests of East St. Louis: P. W. Abt, E. P. Keshner, H. D. Sexton, L. B. Washburn, R. L. Bateman, H. C. Thoene, J. M. Chamberlain, C. T. Jones, Robert Conway, J. H. Jones, Mr. Appell, Robert Bethman, H. L. Griesedick, L. C. Haynes, W. H. Elliott, F. E. Nulsen, P. J. Ward, Edward Klein, Joseph Nestor, J. S. Bonsteng, John Campbell, Lon Harper, H. C. Pfeiffer, M. M. Stephens, F. M. Horner, P. H. Murphy, M. Millard and all ministers and priests of East St. Louis Protestant and Catholic churches.

In addition to the sums telegraphed to San Francisco yesterday by Mayor Cook, as a contribution from the city, and C. T. Jones, representing the National Stockyards, many of the fraternal societies are preparing to donate to the general fund, and will also send a relief fund to the California branches of their order for distribution. The Masonic lodges donated $100, at their meeting Thursday night. The Knights of Pythias contributed $150 at last night's meeting. The A. O. U. W., Odd Fellows, Elks and others have called special meetings for tonight to make appropriations to the fund.

The Family Theater gave a benefit performance last night, and the Broadway Theater will donate the proceeds of tonight's performance to the fund. The Rex Roller Skating Rink will donate the total proceeds of the rink Monday and Monday night.

The stockmen at the Horse and Mule Market are raising a relief fund. Many factories and iron works have announced their intentions of making donations, and will do so as soon as the Relief Funds Committee calls.

BUSCH TELLS OF HORRORS HE WENT THROUGH

He Was Awakened in Hotel by Swaying of Building Like at Boat at Sea.

PIANOS TOPPLED OVER

THEN FLAMES BROKE OUT

City an Inferno With the Firemen Helpless Through Lack of Water.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

UMBRIA, Utah, April 21.—Millionaire Adolphus Busch, who escaped the San Francisco disaster with nothing but the clothes on his back, accompanied by his party in his private car, the Adolphus, passed through this city today en route for his home in St. Louis.

With Mr. Busch, besides several members of his family, are Henry Nicolaus and Carl Conrad, also wealthy St. Louisans.

The St. Louis millionaire has made many trips over the Denver & Rio Grande and his jovial features had become well known. Mr. Busch was scarcely recognizable today. His manner was grave, and the haggard look on his features told of the ordeal through which he had passed.

"I left San Francisco Friday morning," said Mr. Busch to a Post-Dispatch correspondent. "The miles that I put between me and the horrors that I have left behind become all the more appalling when we have time to reflect and realize all it means. While in the destroyed city one could see only a short distance, and the human mind is incapable of conceiving the untold havoc wrought when he views the situation piecemeal.

"It is only when one who has seen it, and then has time to ponder on its extent, that one can begin to realize what the destruction of Frisco has cost the world and the sufferings and hardships it has brought on the more than 350,000 people who made that beautiful place their home.

Awakened by the Swaying.

"Our party had apartments in the handsome St. Francis Hotel on one of the upper floors. The tremendous vibrations of the earthquake instantly awakened each one. Some were hurled from their beds. The building swayed from north to south as some tall tree in a gale.

"The building seemed to rise and fall, as a ship at sea. Furniture was moved violently from its place and was overturned. Even pianos were toppled over on the floor.

"Realizing what had transpired, but not appreciating its extent, I quickly summoned my family and friends and advised that we seek safety in Jefferson square. We made no effort to collect our belongings. The clothing that we had on our backs, and some more that we hastily donned, was all that we took.

"When we reached the open the sight that met our gaze was appalling. Every building that presented itself to view was wrecked, either partially or wholly. The vibrations had not ceased, and at intervals a tremendous crash would tell of the collapse of another building. We could see massive cornices torn from their fastenings, topple from dizzy heights and fall, a tangled mass, to the ground. Tall buildings that the day before were deemed secure from any disaster, collapsed and fell like houses built of cards.

Sun Hidden by Smoke.

"In a short while the fire broke out. The rising sun was hidden by great banks of smoke that arose from the ruins as they burned with surpassing fierceness. The water pipes burst, and the water flooded the streets. Gas mains were opened and the sickly odor of escaping gas was almost overpowering, even in the open.

"The people, stricken without warning, were terrified when they saw the horrors that were being wrought. They were terrified, but withal maintained a calmness and self-possession that was marvelous.

"For several hours we were in the open street, and could see the buildings as they gave way beneath the train of repeated swayings of the solid earth. The smoke from the ruins that caught fire was stifling and almost blinded us. Fires sprang up in all directions. It was apparent the city was doomed.

"It was fortunate in being able after a while to get two carriages and our party was conveyed to Nob Hill, which we were told had escaped the general ruin. The road to this beautiful residence section was blocked with debris, and the drive that ordinary occasions should have lasted a few minutes really took hours and it seemed ages.

"From the heights of Nob Hill we viewed the destruction of the great city. Clouds of dense black smoke overhung the city, but occasionally the wind would lift the smoke and we could see nothing in front of us but ruin and desolation.

Noise as of Battle.

"So fierce was the fire and so utterly incapable of combatting the conflagration were the firemen because of the absence of water, that the flames headed toward the section in which we had sought and found temporary safety. The firemen had resorted to dynamiting the buildings, hoping to check the progress of the fire, and the cannonading of the artillery as they aided the firemen in the work of demolition, sounded as if a great battle were in progress.

"Driven from Nob Hill by the encroachment of the flames, we sought other shelter in the Presidio, and after a day and night of untold horror we managed to board the ferry for Oakland, where we found shelter and comfort in my private car and started for home.

"Conditions in San Francisco are indescribable. More than 100,000 persons are without shelter and are camping in the hills. There is no light after nightfall. There is no water in the mains, and food is exhausted. Martial law prevails, and the order maintained is far better than one could have hoped.

"Despite the calamity that has fallen on the great city of the Far West, I believe that it will rise again. The indomitable pluck and perseverence of the people is already manifest. A city even more beautiful than the one destroyed will arise to take its place. The generous American nation will aid in this, I believe, and will extend to the city the support and financial assistance it merits.

SAYS DOWIE SWINDLED HIM OUT OF $10,000

New Mexico Resident Complains to U. S. District Attorney of Prophet.

SAID ZION BANK STRONG

Investor Can't Get Money Out, and Postoffice Department Notified.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, April 21.—United States District Attorney Morrison has taken up an investigation of the methods of John Alexander Dowie in getting followers and his method of obtaining money from them.

James Surrock came from New Mexico to make complaint against Dowie. He declared he was swindled out of almost $10,000, and that the mails were used in the proceedings. After hearing Surrock's story, the District Attorney detailed an assistant on the case and informed the Postoffice Department of the facts. When the Zion City Bank was hopelessly insolvent Surrock deposited $2000, on the advice of Dowie, he alleged. In a letter dated Dec. 27, he says, Dowie wrote him as follows:

"Zion City Bank is the strongest bank in the world. Do not keep your money where it will be used for all sorts of wicked and questionable things. Deposit it in Zion City Bank and it will be used in clean enterprise and will help extend the kingdom of God.

"If you cannot invest in shares or land, let Zion have the use of your idle money and savings until you need them."

"Surrock invested $8000 in lace stock and deposited $2000 in the bank. When he applied at the bank for his money he could not obtain a dollar.

An official threat that Dowie will be arrested when he comes to Zion City Sunday and attempts to enter Shiloh Tabernacle was made by General Overseer William Glenn Voliva. At the same time the police force of Zion City was increased by 20 men. All arrangements for locking up Dowie and all his followers who may come to the city Sunday have been completed. The prisoners are to be put into the Zion City Police Station.

SHAW COMING, BANQUET IS OFF

Will Review Parade, but Agrees to Omit Dinner Festivities.

Leslie M. Shaw, Secretary of the Treasury, will not dine with local Republicans next week, and the banquet preparations for which have added to the gayety of local politics will not be given.

The text of Mr. Shaw's telegram recalling his acceptance was not disclosed for publication, but it is said that unwillingness to participate in any festivities in view of the San Francisco horror was the reason he gave E. A. Forman, chairman of the Arrangements Committee.

Mr. Shaw will keep his engagement in St. Louis to view the parade of the Missouri Republican League, and to give at least a gentle impetus to his boom for the presidency.

Sim Harris, secretary of the League, is still at work on arrangements for the banquet. Incidentally he is out with an exhaustive exhibit to justify his selection of the six delegates to the league's national convention in Philadelphia. The men appointed received the highest number of votes from Republicans who replied to his letters, Harris says:

The program for the three days during which delegates to the State convention in St. Louis will remain in th city, has been prepared, and includes a reception to Secretary Shaw, a mass meeting at Music Hall and a parade.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Sentences were passed yesterday on three of the men convicted of forgery in the Norfolk & Western stock certificate swindle, in which bogus paper having a face value of hundreds of thousands of dollars was circulated.

Sentence was deferred on Charles Augustus Seaton, the fourth man convicted in this case. He was, however, given an eight-year sentence for grand larceny in connection with the promotion of the Houston & Galveston Interurban Railway, a Texas corporation.

SHOW DOGS NAMED AFTER DELEGATES

Bratton's Fox Hounds Had No Appellations and Hawes Protested.

DIFFICULTY SOON MET

Every Statesman Has a Chance to Win a Blue Ribbon by Proxy.

When Harry B. Hawes, president of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club, arrived at his offices Saturday, he learned that John J. Bratton, well-known East Side horseman and dog fancier, had decided to enter 28 foxhounds at the dog show to be held next week.

But to Mr. Hawes' surprise, not one of the dogs had a name.

This was a vital omission, for under the rules of the kennel club every "bow-wow" of high degree must have a family title.

Mr. Hawes at once called up Bratton over the phone. A spirited conversation followed.

Bratton insisted his pets didn't have any names.

"Just call them anything," he told Mr. Hawes.

"No, you must have them named," insisted the kennel club president.

"O, very well," rejoined Bratton. "We will name them after the members of the House of Delegates."

Bratton's suggestion was agreed on.

A glance over the roster of delegates and a spy into the kennel at once suggested to the judges the advisability of naming one of the hounds after Ralph Coale, the dapper member from the Twenty-eighth Ward.

One of the "foxies" was eating a crust of bread and refused to obey the summons of his master.

"He is pretty hungry when his digestion is satisfied with the ordinary staff of life," said Mr. Bratton.

He is to be known as "Fred Wiedmer and will preside over the Thirteenth Ward booth at the coming show.

There is a fine German hound among the lot. He is quiet and unobtrusive.

"You are christened Henry Priesmeyer," shouted the dog fancier and Mr. Hawes in chorus.

The next was a shy, unassuming animal, with sparkling gray eyes and a fierce mustache. He was named after James J. Nash of the Twenty-sixth Ward.

The most undemonstrative hound in the bunch was the next one which came tripping slying and took a seat on Mr. Bratton's lap. He seemed half-frightened, and once or twice displayed a tremor of nervousness.

The committee voted to give him a bench in the Fifteenth Ward exhibit, under the psuedomyn of "Andrew Gazzolo."

Three or four of the hounds looked very much like brothers. Their whiskers stuck out prominently and one or two seemed to have missed recent operations at the hands of a tonsorial artist.

This defect was ascribed to various causes, and the committee named them as follows: D. F. Hefferman, Third Ward; John Golden, Fourth Ward, anr Frank Hussey of the Twenty-second.

"Smythe" Is Complacent.

A stately specimen in the rear of the kennel, whose bearing was one of particular pride and self-satisfaction, had no trouble winning the family name of Edgar R. Smythe of the Twenty-seventh Ward.

Another barked so fiercely and kept up such a general uproar while the judges, with frowning faces, were doing their best to single out the fine peculiarities of their future family lineage, that the proceedings were temporarily adjourned with the announcement that "Dan Meehan of the Twenty-first Ward" would have to come to order.

When "William Metzler of the Eleventh Ward," acting as sergeant-at-arms, in behalf of a demure little hound, had finally restored quiet, there was a gentle display of lungs from "W. C. Zimmermann of the Sixth," who was voted one of the handsomest of the lot.

The subsequent work of the committee was easy.

There was no trouble in entering Timothy Maloney of the Sixteenth Ward, H. L. Weeke of the Seventeenth, James F. Connell of the Twenty-fifth, Emmet Bentley of the Twenty-third, Herman Gevers of the Eighteenth, F. N. Simmons of the Tenth and Isaac Conran of the Fifth.

Around the neck of each of the christened band was tied a blue ribbon, while bells, to harmonize with their respective names, will be added to their harness when they sit as guests of the Kennel Club next week.

SEEKS MISSING WIFE AND FIVE CHILDREN.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 21.—R. J. Strum of San Francisco is one of the broken-hearted fugitives who is not sure whether his family of six is alive or dead. The Arno Hotel, on Ellis street, was practically destroyed by the earthquake. Mr. Strum said:

"I was in bed at the time and fell through four stories. I was then rescued by ropes, stretched from what remained of the building to the ground. The building was destroyed by fire and I have not the slightest idea whether my wife and mother and four children are alive or not. They may have escaped to the hills, but I fear they perished."

O. W. Posey of Los Angeles, who arrived here from San Francisco yesterday afternoon, gives the following statement of his experience there:

Panic in Palace Hotel.

"When the shock came, at 5:13, I was on the sixth floor of the Palace Hotel. It was thrown out of bed and it seemed as if the whole hotel was coming down. All the big flower pots fell and all the glass in the windows was broken. Women ran out in their nightgowns. Everybody in the hotel rushed downstairs.

"Market street is upheaved in some places as high as 30 feet. Flames from the Palace Hotel met flames from the Parrott Building two blocks away.

"Viewed from the ferry, the city was one vast sheet of flames clear to Green Hill, and north and south as far as the eye could reach.

"All boats going across the bay are crowded with destitute passengers, and all trains on the Southern Pacific are crowded with people fleeing from the stricken city."

"Our experiences of the last few days in San Francisco have completely unnerved us," said Leo Ageust, one of the family of acrobats which was to appear at the Orpheum next week.

Wild Ride Amid Ruin.

"We appeared at the Orpheum the night before the earthquake. All of our properties were destroyed when the Orpheum burned. We were staying at the St. Francis. We just escaped with our lives. When we got to the street we hired an expressman for $50 to take us to the ferry depot. He drove us through mobs of people who acted insanely. Even then there was no Market street left. It was a mass of flames, which roared and crackled, with an occasional explosion adding to the horror.

"Soldiers were everywhere. We were stopped eight times while we were on the way from the St. Francis to the ferry depot. It was only after the most rigid examination that we were allowed to pass.

"The people all seemed to be fleeing to Golden Gate Park, the only haven of refuge left. Awful pictures of desolation met the eye on every side. We expected to be killed every moment as steel and brick buildings tottered to the ground, filling the air with dust which made breathing difficult. Suffocating volumes of smoke rose over the business section and seemed to creep along the ground in the trail of the swiftly progressing fires.

"Deafening reverberations of exploding dynamite numbed the nerves of the ear until no sounds could be distinguished. As we stood at the wreck of the ferry building waiting our turn to go across to Oakland, a sneak thief attempted to wrest the rings from the hand of my wife, who was standing at my side.

"Before I could make a move to stop him a soldier stepped from the struggling crowd and deliberately shot the man, who sank dead at the feet of my wife. A pool of blood formed on the pavement, but no one paid any attention, for such things happened hourly.

"All the laws and rules by which people are governed in their every-day life are forgotten in the stress of such a disaster. Every man is a law unto himself.

"In Oakland there is enough water and food for at least a few days. The water supply is especially large and will not be overtaxed by the demands made upon it."

PANIC IN ITALY; 13 EARTHQUAKES

Province of Siena, Tuscany, Visited by Terrific Seismic Disturbance—Several Buildings, Including City Hall, Damaged at Poggibonsi, 19 Miles From Florence.

ROME, April 21.—Thirteen earthquake shocks were felt in succession this morning in the province of Siena, Tuscany.

Several buildings were damaged, including the City Hall at Poggibonsi, 19 miles south of Florence. The inhabitants of Poggibonsi were panic-stricken.

It is not yet known whether Siena was damaged.

BIGGEST INSURANCE LOSSES IN HISTORY

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Fire insurance men today radically revised their estimates of the losses the various companies would have to pay as a result of the great conflagration in San Francisco. On Thursday it was believed that the total loss to the insurance companies would run somewhere between $50,000,000 and $55,000,000. Today it was the general opinion that the companies would have to pay out fully $100,000,000, and a few men made estimates running as high as $145,00,000.

All such estimates, it was stated, were merely guesswork, which might prove to be far from the facts when settlements were made. None of the insurance men will admit that there is the slightest doubt of the ability of all the companies to meet the losses. During the present year 107 different companies were doing business in California, and it is figured that the San Francisco losses will be divided among 97, at least.

In the Chicago fire there were 335 companies affected. The total loss was $82,821,122. Fifty-five companies were forced to suspend. The resources of the companies of 35 years ago were very small compared with the present day corporations.

That some of the small Western companies, which carried a very large proportion of their business in San Francisco risks, may not survive the strain is thought possible. In the case of the Baltimore fire, where the total insurance loss was $39,000,000, two of the local companies failed.

At next week's conference the insurance men will work out a general scheme for arriving at losses. Every company now has its lawyers at work on the questions which are most likely to cause disputes. The general scheme is to deal with the fire sufferers on a liberal basis, but some of the smaller companies, it was reported, would try to minimize their losses by fighting claims on every possible technicality, chiefly on the ground that buildings were destroyed by earthquakes before the fire touched them. On this subject, E. H. A. Correa of the Home Insuranec Co., said:

"Any company which attempts to escape its liability by such a subterfuge might just as well go out of business forever. Some of them have been hit very hard and one or two of the big companies will be seriously affected, but none of the latter will attempt to dodge liability by any quibble.

"The big companies will take their medicine and prepare to capture new business by their prompt payments and equitable adjustments."

The news that the great fire had burned itself out and was practically under control was hailed with joy by the insurance men, who are now face to face with meeting the biggest losses ever confronted by the business in this country.

Merchants of this city, it is estimated, have lost at least $10,000,000 by the California disaster. These losses are chiefly concentrated in San Francisco, but are also of considerable amount at other points.

The largest losses to New York business houses are distributed among those dealing in textiles and machinery, and more especially in cotton piece goods and carpets. San Francisco has been buying more goods than usual in New York this last winter.

In one way or another, according to an estimate made today, between one-quarter and one-third of all the losses on merchandise in California through the present disaster will fall on New York merchants.

There is another phase of the catastrophe which will cause large losses to New York merchants—the destruction of goods in warehouses in California intended for the New York market. This includes all sorts of native California canned fruits.

The earthquake was quite severe at San Jose and in the Santa Clara Valley, which is the greatest prune district in the world. Many of the large California producers have branches here, which will suffer should the crops be destroyed.

Heartrending Scenes Where Survivors Seek Lost Relatives

OAKLAND, Cal., April 20.—Many residents of Eastern States are attempting to get word to their friends, but it is almost impossible to get a message sent before a 24-hour wait. The telegraph offices are more than a day behind with messages, so people who have relations and friends here should not worry merely because they get no word for several days.

The Chamber of Commerce, churches, newspaper offices and relief headquarters have provided registers for the refugees and are aiding in the work of finding friends and relatives for distracted survivors.

The scenes at these places are heart rending. Though for the most part the refugees are taking their losses and their sorrows with grim fortitude, in many cases the women are unable to bear up under the awful strain. At the Bulletin office on Broadway a woman with four small children entered, seeking traces of her husband and baby, who were separated from them during the rush for the ferry building. While voicing her inquiries she fainted and physicians had to be summoned to restore her. These pathetic and tragic incidents could be multiplied by the hundreds.

SOCIAL BARRIERS LEVELED.

Tonight the crowds that are arriving for the most part represent San Francisco's cosmopolitan side. Chinamen, Italians, Japanese and negroes are mingled together in common misfortune with business men and once well-to-do householders, guests from hotels and Easterners all carry what baggage they can lug ashore. Some drag bedding behind them and all are seeking food and shelter. Lack of water and provisions, and the terrible strain of three days in a doomed city has sapped the vitality and left the refugees exhausted. On this account the task of caring for them is rendered extremely difficult.

Claims Attorney E. M. Bagley of the Oregon Short Line arrived here from Salt Lake tonight, looking for his mother, who was staying at the Ormonde Hotel on the morning of the earthquake. He has not located her and does not know if she has survived. He is one of hundreds of people similarly situated who have already arrived or are hurrying to the stricken districts.

J. G. Moran of Chicago, who was staying with his family at the Palace Hotel, lost his wife and tonight is making frantic search to locate her in Oakland. He fears she may have perished. W. F. Denning has arrived from Sacramento looking for a brother and sister, of whom he has heard nothing since the terrible disaster.

Hurry and Worry

Hurry, like a cyclone, whirls you along at a rate that quickly exhausts your energy, and leaves you a nerveless, wretched, broken-down physical wreck.

Worry accomplishes the same results in another way. It drags you through the dark, gloomy tunnel of forbodings, wrecks your nerves and breaks down the constitution.

Then don't hurry; don't worry. But you will; and your nerveless, exhausted condition brings headaches, neuralgia, heart, stomach, liver and kidney troubles. The thing to do is: Strengthen the nerves with Dr. Miles' Nervine.

"Six months I was bedfast with nervous prostration. I had sinking spells, a cold, clammy feeling, couldn't stand the slightest noise. At times I would almost fly to pieces; stomach very weak. My husband insisted on my taking Dr. Miles' Nervine, and I began to improve before I had finished the first bottle, and to-day I am entirely cured."

MRS. JOSEPH SNYDER, 224 Hudson St., Tiffin, O.

Dr. Miles' Nervine is sold by your druggist, who will guarantee that the first bottle will benefit. If it fails, he will refund your money.

POLICEMAN SEES GIRL DRINK ACID

Takes Poison on Pavement, Staggers Into Lot, Dies in Hospital.

The body of a young woman, with blue eyes and reddish brown hair is at the Morgue awaiting identification. She swallowed carbolic acid Friday afternoon on the pavement of Spruce street, near Sixteenth, and staggered into a vacant lot, where she fell. Her death occurred an hour later at the City Hospital.

Patrolman James Laster saw her actions, but was not near enough to restrain her.

The young woman was 22 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, and weighed about 140 pounds. She wore a black and white dress, blue apron, blue hat, short light jacket and slippers. The empty bottle and a bundle were found beside her.

The police of the Newstead Station are looking for a thief who has decidedly fastidious tastes. He walked away from the rooming house conducted by Mrs. Maria Knabb at 4061 Olive street some time Friday with five feather pillows and a toy Chinese house made of stone.

AWFUL PSORIASIS 35 YEARS

Terrible Scaly Humor in Patches All Over the Body—Skin Cracked and Bleeding—Itching Unbearable—Cured by Cuticura in Thirty Days at Cost of $4.75.

ANOTHER WONDERFUL CURE BY CUTICURA

"I was afflicted with psoriasis for thirty-five years. It was in patches all over my body.

I used three cakes of Soap, six boxes Cuticura Ointment, and two bottles of Cuticura Resolvent. I bathed with the Soap, applied the Ointment once a day, and took the Resolvent as directed. In thirty days I was completely cured, and I think permanently, as it was about five years ago.

"The psoriasis first made its appearance in red spots, generally forming a circle, leaving in the center a spot about the size of a silver dollar of sound flesh. In a short time the affected circle would form a heavy dry scale of a white silvery appearance and would gradually drop off. To remove the entire scales by bathing or using oil to soften them the flesh would be perfectly raw, and a light discharge of bloody substance would ooze out. That scaly crust would form again in twenty-four hours. It was worse on my arms and limbs, although it was in spots all over my body, also on my scalp. If I let the scales remain too long without removing by bath or otherwise, the skin would crack and bleed. I suffered intense itching, worse at nights after getting warm in bed, or blood warm by exercise, when it would be almost unbearable.

"To sum it all up, I would not go through such another ordeal of affliction for thirty-five years for the State of Kansas. (signed) W. M. Chidester, Hutchinson, Kan., April 20, 1905."

Quantity and Quality

"First in Everything."

The new United States Senator, Jefferson Davis, doesn't look the least bit like the old one.

If time is money, Banker Scripture of New Hampshire, who is 100 years old, is a very wealthy citizen.

It is said that ballooning will be kept a "gentleman's sport." At least there will be no gentlemanly killings.

LOCAL RELIEF WORK.

The local relief committee under the chairmanship of Mayor Wells has made an excellent start in the work of collecting money for the San Francisco sufferers. The responses show a generous appreciation of the need and of the obligation to give. Everyone should feel this obligation, in the face of the appalling disaster which has deprived 200,000 people of homes and the means of support.

In the general relief movement there are many suggestions of benefit entertainments and bazars. Of course, no check should be placed upon generous giving. But it is important that there be effective supervision over benefits and other methods by which appeal is made to the public. Would it not be a good plan for the Mayor to appoint a subcommittee on entertainments, for the purpose of passing upon suggestions and plans and supervising them in the interest of the relief funds? Benefits and bazars which have the approval of the relief committee and in which there is an assurance of careful management would undoubtedly receive more liberal support from the people than if there were no supervision whatsoever.

Large sums of money might be realized by attractive, well-managed benefit performances. But they ought to be managed on a sound business basis, so that the largest possible amount will be realized for the sufferers. A great deal of energy and money which might otherwise be wasted may be saved for the fund if the efforts to raise it are rightly directed.

But aside from these methods of raising money, the principal effort should be concentrated on direct contributions. Everyone should give according to his means directly to the fund. All other efforts are supplemental and subsidiary to this.

It seems at last settled that Mr. Rockefeller is a billionaire. Get a move on you, Mr. Beit!

AUTHORITATIVE INTERPRETATION.

It is given out that Mr. John D. Rockefeller Jr. is preparing an edition of the Ten Commandments for use in his Sunday school. He will explain just what they mean and what they don't mean, making it so plain that nobody can ever after complain of ambiguity or obscurity.

This is commendable. The wonder is that the work has never been done before.

But now that a very rich man, qualified by his great wealth to speak with authority on all questions of religion, theology and morality, has taken up the work we shall soon know just where "we are at," in the moral way at least.

It is a great thing to be very, very rich, after all. Questions of orthography, etymology, biology, psychology and all other ologies can be settled authoritatively. Where popes, bishops, presbyters and deacons, lawyers, philosophers, scientists and doctors have failed to speak with convincing force, Mr. Carnegie and Mr. Rockefeller will show us the one true way.

It is to laugh.

Surely a presidential photograph is due Mr. Albert Summers of Coatesville, Pa., in whose house twin boys, six kittens and five puppies, all born within an hour, are shown.

AN INCONSISTENCY.

The reports of the President's wrath over charges contained or implied in Upton Sinclair's novel, "The Jungle," are calculated to draw attention away from the facts in the matter and turn public indignation against the men who have used the muck rake too diligently.

Several years ago the Post-Dispatch made statements of fact regarding bribery, boodling and general graft in the City Hall. A Judge of Criminal Court, angered by what he seemed to think unsupported charges against men of repute in the community, strongly charged the grand jury on the inefable wickedness of libel. By way of parenthesis he granted that if there were such offenses the grand jury should consider them. But the emphasis was not upon the misdeeds alleged, but upon the temerity of the newspaper which asserted them as facts. Nothing came of it at the time, but subsequent investigations by Mr. Folk disclosed a condition much worse than the Post-Dispatch had ventured to allege.

It would seem to an unprejudiced mind that in such cases the man who makes the charges should not be denounced until it be ascertained whether the accusations are true. And such caution is especially needful at this juncture when so many similar charges have been made good by proof.

That the President is not insensible to such considerations is apparent in the fact that he has ordered an investigation. But if he denounces Sinclair for making the charges, why does he send out a Department committee to find out if they are true?

The Missouri River has overcome the United States Government, forcing it to sell every one of the Big Muddy snag boats. Uncle Samuel may be capable as a seaman, but he is helpless as a river sailor on the Missouri.

EMERGENCY AND OPPORTUNITY.

Human nature on the Pacific Coast will soon show its meaning to those who say that "lack of capital will be the chief obstacle to rebuilding San Francisco."

Human nature organizes capital out of itself in every great emergency where it does not find it already organized. Last week, San Francisco, as it stood after the work done during 60 years to make it a great city, represented immense values in organized capital whose disappearance simply creates the emergency out of which within six years the ability of the Pacific Coast American to recover after his losses will create what William H. Crocker is right in prophesying as a "new and better San Francisco."

There is no doubt of this at all. For six weeks there will be suffering it is the duty of the whole country to help to relieve. For six months there will be a hard struggle with the hardest conditions, but for six years to come there will be growing success in making a greater and better city than the city of slums and palaces which has been lost.

In this shock of nature as it has done its worst, the loss of life is almost as great as that of an important battle, and the loss of capital almost as great as in a minor war. But progress will no more stop because of the great calamity which comes at rare intervals from the reactions of nature, than it stops for the greater losses and greater calamities which come so much more frequently when human nature is reacting and disorganizing its own best results.

For the genius of the Pacific Coast, great calamity opens the gateway of the greatest opportunity.

There will be a new and better San Francisco, a city which may express a new and better spirit of civilization so fully that it will be a model for all other cities to imitate in attempting to make themselves what twentieth century cities ought to be.

Income taxation and inheritance taxation are the fairest of all taxing schemes. Can this be the reason why they meet with so much opposition?

OF ROYAL BLOOD.

The wonderful fact has been discovered that A. J. Balfour, late Prime Minister of Great Britain, is descended in the direct female line from Edward I.

The lawyer King and metaphysic statesmen are, however, divided by 20 generations. It is mathematically possible that in the fifteenth generation 280,000,000 persons descended from Edward. How many may fetch their being from him in the twentieth is almost incalculable. The imagination reels before the appalling number.

Of course, such calculations are faulty because intermarriage of kin in every generation cuts off millions of descendants. But Edward's heirs are so numerous in England and America that the honor is attenuated to the highest degree. We are all of us of royal blood. We would all be wearing crowns if the peasant blood injected into the royal fluid had not brought with it an obligation to work for a living. And no man can do much work with a crown pressing on his brow.

Mr. Balfour has better claims to our regard than his descent from England's greatest King.

The worst feature of sign language is that it is used by deaf and dumb married people for quarreling. With the sign language, Rip Van Winkle's exclamation in regard to dumb women, "What wives they would make!" loses all its force.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

MR. FRANCIS' EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In Saturday's issue of your paper, date of April 14, 1906, there appeared an article in regard to the treatment of a boy whose eye was injured by having mortar thrown in it. I think if you had known the true facts you would not have made the criticism you did regarding the case.

I inclose you a copy of a letter from the Chief Dispensary Physician, whom I ordered to make an examination of the case, also copy of a report from Dr. E. J. Ernst, Assistant Dispensary Physician, and a copy of a report made to me by the Assistant Physician in charge of Emergency Hospital. It appears from these reports that when the boy was brought to the Dispensary he received all the attention that it was possible to give him, and that his father declined the offer to send him to the City Hospital. As stated in the report of the Assistant Physician in charge of the Emergency Hospital, that institution is mostly for infectious and contagious diseases, and no patients are sent direct to that hospital from the Dispensary except they are suffering from the diseases mentioned above.

I make this explanation to you so that the department may be placed in the proper light.

CHARLES W. FRANCIS,
Acting Health Commissioner.

FIRST AID INSTRUCTION.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Would it not be a good plan for the school board to include in the course of studies for the advanced grades in the German schools practical instruction by physicians in "First Aid to the Injured?" It occurs to me that the knowledge gained from a course of this sort would be of inestimable value to the people as a whole. Expressions of opinion from yourself, members of the school board, and any others are in order. R. LEE ORCUTT.

THE POST-DISPATCH IS DOING WHAT IT CAN.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Why do not St. Louisans as a rule display more interest in art than they do? In this respect we are far behind Eastern cities which are much smaller than ours. Our people do not seem to care anything about art for art's sake and do nothing practically for it, while those who should show most interest do not seem to be able to arouse any enthusiasm in the circles where we should look for it in a greater degree. We are the fourth city in the United States from a numerical standpoint, but from an artistic, where, O where, are we? I am afraid very far down. In Philadelphia over a dozen three-year scholarships to the Academy of Fine Arts are annually given to the pupils of the public schools, and competition is keen for them, the honor being highly coveted. This develops the artistic feeling and instinct among the young and creates an atmosphere not found here. We have artists here who will compare very favorably with the much-lauded Eastern ones, and there is no reason unless lack of interest why art should not be on the boom instead of on the bum.

If the Post-Dispatch would take hold of the matter right upon the wane of the interest connected with their munificent sculpture presentation, some good might result. It certainly is the paper that does things, and if it should become interested in the art question an awakening is assured.

THE WHEEL OF TIME.

How goes the measured Wheel of Time
Around,
With tirelessness and tread sublime,
Around and round, and never stayed,
The while our history is made;
And men come up with it to spin
Around the arc and pass within
The ground.

A little while may we possess
The top;
A little while may know the stress
And joy of life, and hotly run
The course, as men have ever done.
The stage is set for us, and so
We play the comedy, and lo,
The drop!

Here stood the Kings of Babylon
One day,
And stood a while this height upon
Belshazzar, of his house the last;
And Moses in his sandals passed
Around the arc; and Pharaoh,
With regal pomp, was wont to go
This way.

Here stood illustrious Solomon,
The great;
And Caesar and Napoleon;
And Shakspeare came to see with clear
And undimmed eye, and it was here
Young Alexander stood and wept
Ambitious tears before he slept
In state.

Here stands our mighty Theodore
To play
His giant part, a while to soar;
And always goes the wheel around
With tirelessness and tread profound;
And men come up to stand upon
The passing height, and then are gone
For aye.

Scientific Determination.

"Undoubtedly," said the Geologist, "the Frisco earthquake was caused by an adjustment of the rising coast line upon its foundation."

"It was caused by volcanic correlation," said the Vulcanist. "Vesuvius fired up, and its energy was communicated to the other volcanic centers through the seismic subways."

"No," said the Astronomer, "the Frisco shake was caused by the sunspots. The sun-spots, some of which are larger than our earth, get between our earth and the sun and so shut off the heat as to cause a too-rapid cooling and contraction of the earth."

Whereupon, having agreed, they unbolted the door and admitted the reporters.

MRS. NAGG AND MR.—

If Mr. Gorky Is the Man With the Muck-Rake, She Is for Roosevelt.

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By Roy L. McCardell.

ROY McCARDELL

"WHO is this man with the muck-rake they are talking about so much, Mr. Nagg? Some friend of yours, I know; because the name sounds like it. And this Mr. Gorky? I know he is a friend of yours! And nice friends you have, Mr. Nagg! If I went with such people a pretty row you would raise!

"O, it is very well for Mr. Gorky to come to this country to have a good time. But I notice that he left his real wife behind him in Russia, and yet, after that, if a married woman dares to ask her husband where he has been until all hours of the morning and after 11 o'clock at night, I suppose he will have the impudence to say that he was working for her and the children, and that it is her place to greet him with a smiling face and ask him if he has had his supper.

"Mr. Gorky should be ashamed of leaving his wife in Russia and coming to this country to shout 'Down with the Czar!' and take up a collection, for I've always noticed that those anarchists and socialists always make a speech and then take up a collection 'for the cause.'

"Nobody knows what the 'cause' is, but there is always a collection. I only know that I asked Brother Willie about this Mr. Gorky, and all he said was 'Get the hook!' I could tell by his tone of voice that he had no use for Mr. Gorky.

"Still I know from the way Brother Willie said it that his friends, who belong to the Jolly Pallbearers, have no use for Mr. Gorky, so what I say is that Mr. Gorky better go back to Russia and be a good provider for his own wife and his own family, instead of coming to this country and being ejected from respectable hotels!

"It is of no interest to me, and you need not take his part! Of course, all you men stand together, but that doesn't excuse you. I suppose this Mr. Gorky from Russia belongs to the Sheltering Order of Wok-Wok, and will be protected in everything he says or does!

"So far as I am concerned, I am not interested in him, and that is why I say to you: Don't try to make excuses for him; if this Mr. Gorky is a friend of yours and you have brought him all the way from Russia to cause a quarrel between us, why you may quarrel, but I will not!

"No, Mr. Nagg, you may quarrel! Quarrel all you wish! Say what you want to! But do not attempt to defend this Mr. Gorky, the man with the muck-rake, who is in this country telling us that all rich people should be taxed!

"O, do not try to say to me that it wasn't this Mr. Gorky. I will not listen to you say one word against President Roosevelt, and if you stood there till judgment day trying to tell me that the President said it was the men with the muck-rakes and not Mr. Gorky who said all rich people should be taxed until they were poor, I would not believe you that he would talk so foolish.

"I saw President Roosevelt when he was inaugurated and he had a lovely set of teeth, and smiled beautifully at everybody, and the parade was just lovely, and the music the bands played was just grand! And that is why I am for our President every time, and if you want to vote for Mr. Gorky for President it will never be with my consent!"

A FEW CHOICE STORIES

The Chairman Was Mixed.

The chairman of the committee was addressing a meeting at a teachers' institute.

"My friends, the school work is the bulhouse of civilization. I mean—ah"—

The chairman had stage fright.

"The bulhouse is the school work of civ"—

A smile began to make itself felt.

"The workhouse is the bulschool of"—

He was evidently twisted.

"The schoolbui is the housework"—

An audible snicker spread over the audience.

"The bulschool"—

He was getting wild. So were his hearers. He mopped perspiration, gritted his teeth and made a fresh effort.

"The schoolhouse, my friends"—

A sigh of relief went up. Ah, now he has got his feet under him again. He gazed suavely around. The light of triumphant self-confidence was enthroned upon his brow.

"Is the woolbark"—

He gasped, and that was all.—Judge's Magazine for Fun.

Vain Wishes.

Shakspeare was putting the finishing touches to "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Dropping his pen, he sighed:

"If this were only two or three centuries later!"

"And why, William?" asked Francis Bacon.

"We could write in a part for a wooden Indian and a bale of hay and put this on as a musical extravaganza and retire on our fortunes within three months."—Life.

"There is only one ordained missionary in the world for 900,000 heathen, your excellency," said the missionary.

CLEVER THINGS I NEVER SAID

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By Lowe R. Case.

GEORGE W. FLOYD, manager of the Garrick Theater, was bewailing to me the lack of stage originality.

"For instance," he moaned, "in plays like 'Sapho' and 'Camille,' why should the the author resort to that old chestnut time-killing stunt of having a maid bustling about dusting a piece of furniture?"

"I suppose," I replied, with a gleam of roguish wit, "it's done in order to prove to the audience that there's at least one clean thing in the play."

My dear old college chum, Alonzo C. Stewart, president of the Police Board, was giving me his confidential opinion of the way politicians and reformers are trying to meddle with his department.

"Why in blazes can't they let me run it alone?" he cooed in his softly plaintive way. "'Too many cooks'—

"Spoil the policeman," I finished merrily, with keen memories of our kitchen's mighty guest.

Maxim Gorky had dropped in on me for a quiet revolutionary chat.

"What I like best about your great and glorious country," he began, furtively consulting his copy of "English at a Glance," "is the fact that you have no large leisure class"

"Oh, yes we have, Max," I contradicted humorously. "Only here we don't chriaten them Grand Dukes. We call them tramps."

"Oh, the joys of spring," sighed my poetic old playmate, Ed Butler, as he looked up from his task of writing a sonnet. "My greatest woe in life is that there's no place on earth where it's spring all the year round."

"There is such a place, Butler, old chap, if one could only find it," I responded, slapping him on the back in my artlessly familiar way. "The mysterious place where spring chicken, spring lamb and spring vegetables come from."

My bonnie, braw, canny crony, Andy Carnegie, was telling me of a friend who had volunteered to read any phonetic-spelling letter the Laird o' Skibo might choose to write to him.

"He's a gude frien' to promize sic a thing," commented Carnegie. "I must e'en gie him a fine library"—

"Why not a hero medal?" I suggested with my inimitable dry humor.

Saved.

"Sir, keep your distance!"

The brave girl had drawn her trusty hatpin.

The ruffian shrank back.

"You bet I'll keep it," he said. I thought you only had a gun."

Then he sprinted in search of the distance mentioned, for there are perils before which Brute courage fails.—Philadelphia Ledger.

BRIDGE WHIST CLUB

Written for the Post-Dispatch
By Grinnan and Barrett.

"YES," said Mrs. Oliver Quiver, vice-president of the Bridge Whist Club, "because Dr. Bitting has raised a question as to the propriety of playing whist for prizes, we've decided to drop bridge for a while. We're going to play poker. That, at least, isn't hypocritical.

"Mrs. Wiseburd—she's the one who first suggested it—has been teaching me a lot about it. Poker seems terribly complicated until somebody sits down with you and tells you, and then you know all about it. It just comes to you like magic. The kitty isn't a real cat at all. It has something to do with the limit, I think. And do you know the auntie isn't a real person either! At the beginning of the game everybody gives the dealer a counter—only you call them chips—and that's the auntie. All of the funny things about poker is the strange name they have for everything. Now, in bridge when you say 'Grand slam,' everybody knows what you mean, but poker's very, very different.

"When I first heard Mrs. Wiseburd talking about 'sweetening the Kitty' I supposed of course the jackpot was something like a sugar bowl, but it isn't at all. Whenever you have two pairs of jacks or better, you take all the trumps, and that's a jackpot.

"But you don't name the trump when you begin to play. Mrs. Wiseburd says you must keep that a dead secret. First you deal the cards all around and then everybody puts in a chip—either a red one or a blue one or a white one, I forget which—and if anybody wants to raise you—doesn't that sound cute, 'raising you'?—they put in two chips. And then you throw away the cards you don't need, although that seems very foolish to me, because they only give you as many as you throw away, and you are liable not to get any better cards than the ones you discarded—sometimes not as good, Mrs. Wiseburd says. But anyhow you have to do it.

"And then you look at your hand, and if you haven't made what you expected to make—a royal straight, four of a kind or a flush full on threes—you pass the make, or else your partner goes it alone, or something. That's the only point I'm not absolutely certain about. But I know from what Mrs. Wiseburd says it's going to be perfectly grand.

"Did I tell you Mrs. Gabalong was back from the sanitarium, where they took her when her nervous system broke down after she had almost won the prize three times hand running? She says for days and days the sanitarium people didn't allow her to speak a word. Poor thing! How she must have suffered."

THE NEWEST BOOKS.

WHEN the members of the Once-a-Week Book Club assembled for their most recent meeting they had just finished the reading of Owen Wister's new novel, "Lady Baltimore," published by the Macmillan Co., New York, and were eager for its discussion.

"Owen Wister's a Pennsylvanian, isn't he?" queried the Artist. "I've somehow got him fixed in my mind as one, anyway."

"Yes," replied the High School Teacher; "born in Philadelphia and educated at Harvard University, and then, for a time, roughing it out on a Western ranch."

"Well," commented the Artist, "he's certainly a consistent son of the City of Brotherly Love, for a more friendly appreciation of the people of the South than is found in his 'Lady Baltimore' I've never seen come from any Easterner. It's really remarkable in its comprehension of the Southern temperament and the South's point of view in looking back at old Civil War days."

"That's because Wister has knocked about a bit and become, as he says, an American rather than an Easterner—national, in other words, instead of sectional," remarked the former Congressman. "He realizes two great truths, the first being that the Civil War and its passions are things of the past, and the second that both North and South believed they were right and were fighting for 'their country' in the '60s. And the significance of it is that Owen Wister, born just as the Civil War began, typifies the younger generation in his attitude toward that conflict. They're neither 'Northerners' nor 'Southerners'—that is, the intelligent ones—they're Americans, with something better to do than fighting a dead fight over again."

"I have an idea, too," suggested the Kindergarten Director, "that Mr. Wister has actually met those charming Southern people of King's Port, whom he describes so lovingly in 'Lady Baltimore,' and has learned, as his grandparents knew well, how very much alike is the good old Colonial stock of this country, whether it hail from Massachusetts or Virginia, New Hampshire or South Carolina, and that there's any number of these fine families still maintaining the old standards in the South."

"That's precisely what he shows us in this new story," agreed the Old Playgoer. "And a charmingly quaint comedy he makes of the stage society of King's Port, old-fashioned and proud of its blue blood and traditions. There's the atmosphere of 'Quality Street' in the picture—you remember Maude Adams in that delightful play, don't you?—and I shouldn't be the least surprised to see the delicious Mrs. Gregory St. Michael and the quixotic John Mayrant and the spirited Miss Eliza La Heu and all the other King's Port people on the stage before long. They're very high-class comedy, I can tell you."

"But how scathingly through his imaginary teller of the story, the likable Augustus, who is really himself, does Owen Wister ridicule our new-rich multimillionaires!" exclaimed the Literary Grain Broker. "He makes 'em look like 30 cents compared with the true-blue aristocrats who figure in 'Lady Baltimore'—and we had been led to believe of late years that the multimillionaire set constituted the only 'real thing' in American society. It sounds almost like lese majeste for Wister to laugh at them the way he does."

"They're no more the real aristocrats of this country," cried The Girl, indignantly, "than such bounders as Barney Barnato and 'Jubilee' Juggins—or whatever his name was—were of English high society. They're simply rich, that's all, and, as Mr. Wister himself points out, about all they do is to prove that you can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

The next moment she laughed to herself. "How funny it is," she resumed, "to read a romance that revolves around a slice of cake—the famous 'Lady Baltimore cake' baked by Miss La Heu! Yet how natural a comedy it is when one remembers that the first meeting between the hero and heroine occurred when he came to her to order a 'Lady Baltimore' as the wedding cake for his marriage to another girl!"

"You're right," broke in the Old Playgoer. "That was a genuine comedy beginning for a story, and the old-fashioned comedy atmosphere is finely maintained throughout the rest of the story. John Mayrant and Eliza La Heu are as attractive a pair of sweethearts as I've met in fiction for many a long year, and the setting of their romance in such an ideal Southern town as King's Port, and especially in the Woman's Exchange shop in King's Port, is admirable. I don't remember a more dramatic contrast than when [illegible] brings his automobile-full of Newport parvenues into the town and shows [illegible] cheap and gaudy and loud they are when they set side by side with [illegible]ally nice people. About all they and their automobile left behind them, he tells us, was a bad smell."

"It was cleverly done," conceded the Artist. "But, as I said before, the most remarkable feature of 'Lady Baltimore,' to my thinking, is its appreciation and understanding of the best type of Southerners by a Northerner. I didn't know it could be done, upon my word!"

"It depends entirely," said the High School Teacher, "on the Northern eyes that do the seeing, just as it would in the case of a Southerner meeting the really good old Northern families. In the eyes are those of a well-born and well-bred person, they recognize the birth and breeding of the others instantly. Philadelphia, you know, is one of the proudest 'old-family' cities we've got—and I have an idea that Owen Wister belongs to its 'old-family' set. Anyway, he writes as if he did."

"And he has written a delightful story," said The Girl. "It's a worthy successor to 'The Virginian'—although entirely different."

"I hope," ventured the Literary Grain Broker, "that women won't fall in love with John Mayrant as unanimously as they did with the cowboy hero of 'The Virginian.' It's a shame when a whole country full of girls fall in love with one man!"

DARWINISM AS SOCIALISTIC PROPAGANDA.

Charles H. Kerr & Co. of Chicago are engaged in publishing a series of books intended to popularize the evolutionary theory of life as a scientific basis for the growth of Socialism. Among these books are "The Evolution of Man," by William Bolsche; "Germs of Mind in Plants," by R. H. France, both in the Library of Science for the Workers, and "The Universal Kinship," by J. Howard Moore, in the International Library of Social Science.

It is a noteworthy fact that the propaganda of Socialism appears to be all-inclusive. Its opponents are on the defensive; it is engaged in building up as well as breaking down. And one of its efforts is intended to prove the inherent kinship, not only of man with his fellows, but of man with the entire brute and vegetable creation, presenting life as a whole, and thus destroying the medieval and ancient ideas of divine right for the few.

The object of this scientific atack upon the doctrine of the Superman or ruling class is thus set forth:

"A generation of scientific students have now been applying Darwin's method to every branch of science. They have supplied the 'missing links' in the chain of evidence which he offered in 'The Descent of Man,' and they have accumulated the facts to prove that 'mind' is only a form of 'life,' differing in no essential respect from the life which we can observe not only in animals, but in plants. Moreover, the proof is already all but complete that 'life' is only a form of that 'energy' which is inseparable from all 'matter,' so that henceforth we must think of man as being developed and governed by the same unchanging laws that control the movements of the stars. So it is that modern science confirms the faith of the organized laborers of the civilized world that the forces of the universe are working out a better social order in which the parasitic ruling class, now become useless, shall disappear, and the workers of hand and brain shall be the human race."

Whatever effect these books may have in furthering the advance of Socialism, they are certainly admirably adapted to promote sympathy and breadth of view regarding animals and all life lower than the human. "The Universal Kinship" is full of studies and anecdotes of animals, birds and other creatures, and makes a powerful appeal for humane treatment of these fellow-beings. Its message is that "the world is growing better. And in the future—in the long, long ages to come—it will be redeemed. The same spirit of sympathy and fraternity that broke the black man's manacles and is today melting the white woman's chains, will tomorrow emancipate the workingman and the ox; and, as the ages bloom and the great wheels of the centuries grind on, the same spirit shall banish selfishness from the earth, and convert the planet into one unbroken and unparalleled spectacle of peace, justice and solidarity."

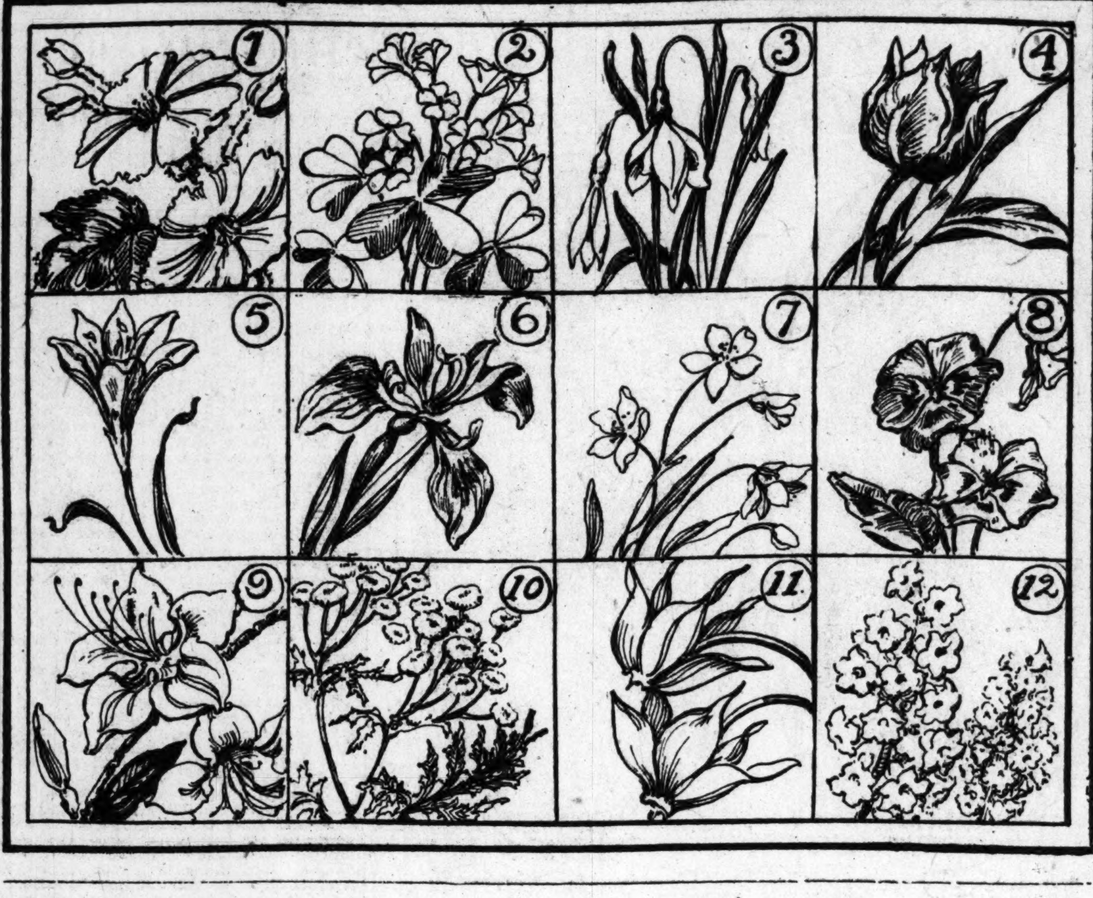

A CAUTIOUS PSYCHICAL INVESTIGATOR.

Perhaps the most striking characteristic of Prof. James H. Hyslop's latest book, "Enigmas of Psychical Research," is the evidence of extreme caution in summing up the facts and drawing conclusions from them. Indeed, Prof. Hyslop appears to be extremely anxious to avoid conclusions of any kind, except that psychic research is of great importance and that it is the duty of scientific and religious men to devote time and attention to it.

After a preface, in which Prof. Hyslop shows the value of a study of the residual phenomena of nature—the odd, unusual and obscure—he devotes chapters to the ancient oracles, the history of crystal gazing with modern experiments in this field; telepathy, dreams, apparitions, clairvoyants, premonitions and mediumistic phenomena. As to the last named, Prof. Hyslop asserts that he does not believe in one of them. But he hastens to add that he does not dogmatically deny their possibility—that would be unscientific. Up to the present he has not seen anything that would convince him of their truth. In spite of this, however, he evidently must be classed with the believers in a spiritual side to nature, rather than with the materialists. The chief value of his book is its insistence upon caution, caution, caution, in coming to conclusions based upon occult phenomena.

Perhaps the most interesting chapter of the book is the concluding one, on the importance of physical research on ethical grounds. He believes that modern materialism is undermining religious belief, and that, with the belief in immortality overthrown, the ethical ideal of human brotherhood will be swept away. Prof. Hyslop believes it is the duty of the church to take hold of this study and assimilate whatever facts are proved, thereby saving the race from a condition of ruin which would undoubtedly follow the triumph of materialism. WHAT DO THE FIRST LETTERS OF THESE FLOWERS SAY?

ANOTHER BOOK BY VILJOEN.

Gen. Ben J. Viljoen, who was second in command of the burgher forces in the Boer-British War, has written a book which is being published in St. Louis, in which he tells of his adventures in that war and gives his impressions of America, which is now his adopted home. His descriptions of the battles and campaigns in which he played an important part are vivid and stirring. A chapter is devoted to a consideration of what the General thinks will be the most practical fighter of the future. This, he thinks, will be a mounted infantryman, who must, however, have two main qualifications if he is not to be an incumbrance to his side. These are that he shall be a thorough horseman and a good shot. He thinks mounted infantrymen will develop greater initiative, the possession and use of which he deems of great importance.

There is a mournful note running through a chapter on the future of the Boer people. Of the issue of the war he says: "We submitted to the inevitable. We did not then, and do not now, feel that we were beaten. The Boer has now the full measure of the fighting quality of his conqueror, and fears him much less than he did before the late war. He has laid down his rifle in obedience to the voice of exhaustion, but not because he felt crushed. It is an undecided question with the Boer today whether the late war has destroyed the ideal of the Africander nation of a great and free people or whether it was sprinkling baptismal blood on the forehead of South Africa's sons."

The book, printed by the A. Noble Printing Co., is to be sold for the benefit of the irreconcilable Boer families emigrating to the United States from South Africa.

A WILDERNESS GIRL TRANSFORMED.

"The Girl From Tim's Place," by Charles Clark Munn, is a story combining many excellent features. Primarily, it shows how "Chip" McGuire, a girl found at a vile wilderness half-way house in the Maine woods, ran away and was gradually transformed by good influences until she became a lovable and beautiful character. But the author is such an enthusiast of Nature, that the story gives one a splendid picture of life in the vast Maine forests, where civilization has not penetrated with its artificialities and weaknesses. There is so much hunting, trapping and fishing in the story, that the boy will enjoy it whether he takes an interest in the heroine or not. There are two first-class villians, whom the author allows to be killed off right in the middle of the story—a daring experiment in novel writing. After that, there is the development of the love-making part of the plot, for the youthful reader. Old Cy Walker and some of the other characters will interest maturer readers. Cy is a backwoods philosopher, full of wise saws such as: "The more I see o' the world, the better I like the woods;" "A girl with a new ring allus hez trouble with her hair;" "While ye're argufyin' with a fool, jes' figger thar's two on 'em." Cy is somewhat pessimistic, but his heart is in the right place. It is a book that will inspire the young reader while it interests and amuses. (Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Co., Boston.)

OLD TIMES IN HAWAII.

Dr. Henry M. Lyman, son of a missionary, has written a book, "Hawaiian Yesterday," which should cause an American to understand how it was that the Hawaiian Islands naturally and inevitably became American territories. In the days of the author's boyhood, these islands were almost the only outlet for American missionary zeal, and a great many New England families devoted their lives to the spread of American ideas in religion and civilization among the natives. In those days the journey to Hawaii meant a six-months' voyage around Cape Horn. Supplies and clothing came once a year from Boston, and it sometimes happened that there was not enough. "On a certain occasion the Rev. Mr. Richards arrived from his station at Lahaina, only in time to find that the last vestige of clothing had been distributed, leaving him out in the cold. This was a dreadful disappointment, for his only pair of black trousers was in the last stage of disintegration; and in what other color could he appear before the Lord as an honored and God-fearing ecclesiastic? His excellent wife came cheerfully to the rescue, bringing forth from some hidden store an old black satin skirt," which was transformed into a suit of staid and somber hue.

The book is entirely reminiscent and historical, but gives interesting sketches of visits to Mauna Loa with its terrible volcano, and has a number of interesting illustrations. (Chicago: A. C. McClurg & Co.)

INFORMATION ON THE ORIGIN OF LIFE.

In writing "What a Young Boy Ought to Know," the revised edition of which just having been issued by the Vir Publishing Co. of Philadelphia, the author, Sylvanus Stall, D. D., has handled with delicacy information which is too often evaded by a great majority of mothers and fathers.

In his "foreword to parents" the author clearly sets forth that information concerning the origin of life should always reach the child through its parents. Realizing how few parents know how to present this difficult and delicate subject in a proper manner to the mind of an inquiring child, the author has handled the subject in such a form that parents may present the thought in their own language, read suitable parts, or place the little book in the hands of the growing boy as the judgment of the parents may determine.

The perpetuation of life among plants, fishes, birds and animals is set forth in a manner as delicate and interesting as it is scientific and satisfactory to both parent and child. Children should not and would not be left to learn these sacred truths in an improper way from vicious persons if parents knew of the better way made plain and easy in this little book. The book has been translated into 14 languages in Europe and Asia, and the entire series, which includes books to men, young and old, has attained a circulation of over a million copies.

Socialism in America.
WHAT IT MEANS.

The State and the Individual.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In your issue of April 16 I find the following: "Is it better to perfect the individual and then work through him to a perfect form of government, or is it better to perfect the form of government and then work through it to perfect the individual?"

It is better to perfect the individual and then work through him to a perfect form of government. But are our present forces of perfection, our environments, the social conditions under which we live, conducive to individual perfection?

There are in the United States, in round numbers, over 2,000,000 children toiling in shop, factory and mine, 10,000,000 poor, underfed, underclothed and badly sheltered, and 4,000,000 paupers. Every tenth man who dies in New York is buried at public expense in the potter's field.

In view of these statements, gathered from reliable sources, are not our present conditions rather a culture bed for poverty, vice, illiteracy, crime and degeneracy?

We are quite ready to build almshouses, asylums, hospitals, prisons, homes, etc., but are slow to look into and remove the underlying cause that is making it necessary for society to multiply the above-named institutions.

The individual in a unit, the government is a whole. A perfect government presupposes a perfect unit. The Socialist simply realizes, correctly, I think, that economic conditions have more to do with the individual perfection than all other forces combined, for they lie at the bottom of most of our social evils; hence he proposes to change those conditions so they will yield the greatest good and with it individual perfection to the greatest number of units.

This economic change as advocated by Socialists consists in its last analysis of co-operative in place of competitive industry. It is not claimed that this change will at once perfect our government, but it is rather an important step in this direction in that it bestows upon the individual economic independence, minimizes graft, removes the incentive for crime and gives the worker time for study and recreation, all of which mean so much for the individual and through him for our government.

The Socialist does not find fault so much with our "form of government," but insists that it fulfill its function and serve the objects for which governments are instituted among men. The rights of citizens, chief among which are "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," should be guaranteed to all on equal terms. This elementary principle of government means, if it means anything at all, economic freedom. Economic freedom, which was compatible with individual manufacturing, is no longer compatible with private capitalism. We have reached a stage in industrial evolution where the worker no longer depends on crude tools which he owns, but on mighty machines, which he does not own and can use only with the permission of the owner thereof, who dictates what the worker's share of the product should be, the number of hours he should work and the conditions under which he works.

It is the mission of Socialism to bring this about through the socialization or "peoplization" of all the means of production and distribution.

MICHAEL SHADID.

Finds an Objection.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Mr. N. O. Nelson says among other things in his definition of Socialism that "the great majority of Socialists (?) simply want the means of earning a living made accessible to all on equal terms, and then let each work how, when and where he pleases."

Yes, that is just where the stumbling block comes in. If the incapable, lazy and invalid man worked "how, when and where he pleased" would there not be discontent and trouble on all sides? Would not the capable, industrious and honest men kick? How are they or anyone else going to give everybody the same opportunity when men are so different? They have not explained this, the most vital part of the question; they cannot do it satisfactorily to a conservative, thoughtful person.

What man in this great country of freedom and justice cannot have plenty if he is capable?

NEW YORK VIEWS
Written to the Editor of the World.

Ambition Vs. Socialism.

Socialism in America is an indefinite term, and its meaning varies according to the industry, wealth and education of the man defining it. I should say that true socialism meant a state of affairs tending to improve the general condition of all of our citizens. This cannot be brought about by the will of the rich nor by the dictates of the very poor and discontented. When true socialism prevails it will be through the influence of what are called the middle classes, whom Lincoln designated as the plain people, meaning those who occupy the middle plane—neither very rich nor very poor. The captalist is not competent to suggest conditions, as he is an extremist, and the laboring class because it is representative of the other extreme. While the labor unions are as arbitrary as they are at present, denying to a workman not a member of their organization the right assured to every citizen that he shall work when, how and for whom he pleases, they are incompetent to suggest measures which will insure justice and happiness to the whole people, and their action in this respect deprives them of the sympathy of the great mass of our citizens. The capitalist, on the other hand, is bound by his environment to look with a prejudiced mind on those less successful in life than he, particularly if constantly engaged in strife with labor leaders unknown to him, who assume to act for his employes.

I believe that when the time is ripe a real Moses will appear to lead the great captains of industry and the army of laborers in one triumphant procession having a common interest in protecting each other and working in harmony. I believe that arrangements will be effected in the near future by which all our great railroads and industrial corporations will be run on a profit-sharing basis with their employes. This can be done without any social revolution. Then in bad business years the workman will be contented with a meager allowance, with the assurance that when the tide turns and prosperity reigns he will be able to have a share of the increased earnings. Then we shall hear no more of the present agitation of the new doctrine of municipal ownership, which is as fallacious in theory as it would be in practice. Never while ambition is the ruling factor in man's makeup will real socialism be possible, and my humble opinion is that when ambition dies our race will deteriorate and life will not be worth living. I do hope and believe, however, that the time will surely come when greed will give place to charity, envy to hope and faith in each other will breed the love of fellow man in the hearts of a more contented and united population of our great country. Let us all resolve to follow strictly the teachings of the Golden Rule, and socialism will be a fact and not a theory. Let us all work together for the greatest good of the greatest number.

HENRY CLEWS.

A Sane Order of Civilization.

Socialism in the United States is not different from Socialism in any other part of our sphere where the common man is awakening to know and to feel for himself and to understand his relation to all who work to produce.

The movement is international, with common aims, and its supporters are comrades the world over, be they yellow, black or white.

Their purpose in a nutshell is to require of each according to his ability and render to each according to his needs. They wish to settle for all time the economic strife between blood brothers and call man up out of the jungle where only beasts should dwell and place him, the man, on a plane where fraternity and a true social spirit shall predominate. Man was created not for himself, but to fulfill a divine purpose. "Ye are all members of one body and of one another" is plain truth, and man is unwise to depart from or persistently withhold himself from a movement that seeks to establish a sane and just order of civilization.

The Abolition of Wage Slavery.

While the discussion of Socialism is welcome, no matter from what standpoint it is, it is certainly a pitiable spectacle to see so many seemingly intelligent people argue a subject that is of such paramount importance today with so little knowledge of even the rudiments of this scientific subject.

They approach the subject from a humanitarian standpoint, overlooking entirely its logical value—to wit, "the abolition of wage slavery," which is crushing the very life out of the working class, with no other prospect of escape from its ever-increasing horror but in the final emancipation of the working class and the establishment of the Socialist republic. SCHREIBER BIG LOSER THROUGH EARTHQUAKE

St. Louis Horseman Had Successful Season but a Vast Sum of Money Due Him Has Not Been Collected and May Be Entirely Lost.

John P. McInerney, a well-known bookmaker, passed through St. Louis Saturday morning, en route to New York from San Francisco. Mr. McInerney left San Francisco on April 15, three days prior to the earthquake. Speaking of the racing outlook on the Pacific Coast he said:

"It will be three years at least before San Francisco sufficiently recovers from this frightful thing to support a race meeting and it will be from seven to ten years before the meetings will be as pretentious as they have been the past three or four winters, the past winter particularly. The magnitude of the patronage at Ingleside and Oakland since last November was truly wonderful. President Williams of the New California Jockey Club, I understand, is in Paris, so it is not likely that any official announcement as to the plans of the club for the relief of the stricken horsemen will come until he has been communicated with. There will, of course, be no attempt to finish out the season of racing, which was scheduled to close on May 5. Since about eighty per cent of the horse owners, trainers, jockeys, bookmakers, clerks and stable attendants had their residences in Oakland, I do not figure that the loss of life in their ranks has been heavy. Barney Schreiber had his residence in the Alexandria, on O'Farrell street. I see that the building has been destroyed by fire, but since it was not demolished by the quake, I take it that Barney is safe. Barney has had a most successful winter, but he has not collected all the money he has won. Ten days ago he held unpaid markers footing up $110,000. I do not know how he will collect it now. Barney is well liked in California and his horses have been persistently followed by the natives. It would be hard to convince them that there is a better two-year-old anywhere than Horace E. Trainers think that in Bannockburn, Barney has the coming sire in this country. The Bain Brothers made a winning book this season. They were living at the Clarendon Hotel at Larkin and Market streets. Gil Curry was another who had quarters there. Jack Curry is at Pleasanton with his trotters. Col. W. E. Applegate and his crew left a week before the earthquake. Garnet Ferguson was living over at Oakland. E. C. Hopper had his residence in San Francisco. 'One-Two-Three' Martin also had his residence in San Francisco. Seattle, I guess, will be the objective point of the majority of the horse owners now. I do not think many of them will try to reach Petaluma, which was to open up right after Oakland. The Seattle meeting will open June 1. It will have an open ring this year and should be a good one."

ATHENS, Greece, April 20.—The American team has arrived here for the Olympic games. It was met by the Greek athletes, led by a band playing national airs.

We were all taken into carriages decorated with flags from all nations. All along the line there were great crowds who cheered the Americans, waving American flags and crying out in Greek welcome to us. The whole city was decorated in our honor. Everybody seems to be bent on giving us a good time. Everywhere the camera fiend stopped they took our pictures. Those who know English use it in their hearty greeting. When we arrived we were all tired out. Each man hopes to be in shape, however, by Wednesday at the opening of the games. It was a hard trip. The touring agency with which we booked for passage put from four to six men in small staterooms. The food was so bad that we had to buy our own provisions at each port that we put into.

Finally we left the management of the touring agency at Patros and took a train independently. Bad food is responsible for the poor condition of the men.

Post-Dispatch readers will be kept thoroughly posted on the doings of the American team at Athens. Robert Edgren, sporting editor of the New York Evening World, who went to Athens as a member of the team, will cable daily reports of every important event, and from time to time will send drawn illustrations and photographs. Daily letters are also expected from Mr. Edgren, so that every move of the team, individually and collectively, will be recorded for the benefit of Americans interested in America's success in athletic competition against the world.

NORDYKE LOSES SAVINGS IN FRISCO

Ravens' First Baseman Had Considerable Money Invested in Frisco Real Estate.

Louis Nordyke, the first baseman of the Ravens baseball team has lost what was for a man in his position, a considerable sum, in the San Francisco earthquake.

Nordyke had a few thousand dollars saved up. He invested in a San Francisco trust company which did a large real estate loan business. While Nordyke has no certain information on the subject he feels that the company had most of its money loaned on San Francisco property and figures that his investment has gone glimmering.

Sheehan and Nealon of the Pittsburg Club are San Francisco boys who are worrying over more than money. Sheehan has a wife and baby living in the doomed city, while Nealon's father is a resident of Nob Hill and a well-known sportsman.

GOT INTO WRONG FLAT.

Mr. Hamburger Missed Home by a Block at Night.

Berthold Hamburger will take a good look the next time he comes in late before entering the house. He did not take a good look Friday night and got into the wrong house, which tended to bring his motives into question.

Mr. Hamburger moved a few days ago from 2861 Delmar boulevard to 1222A North Sarah street. When he went home Friday night he missed it by a block. There is a flat at 1122A North Sarah street which looks very much like the one at 1222A. Hamburger thought it was his flat, opened the door with his latch key and walked in.

It struck him when he reached the upper hallway that the furniture had been moved around, but the door of his room had not. As he laid his hand on the knob the door opened and a very large man confronted him. He was also an inquisitive and a profane man, for he inquired what Hamburger wanted there and made it impressive by swearing liberally.

Hamburger said he guessed there must be a mistake and the big man said he guessed so, too. Another man came out of another door. Hamburger insisted that he got into the wrong house and was advised to get out of it as quick as he could. He did so, and will look hard at the number before he enters a flat at a late hour again.

College Collations

The crack Smith Academy baseball nine, the winners of the 1905 interscholastic league pennant, will meet the Yeatman team at Kulage Park Saturday afternoon.

Washington University plays the Country Club at the latter's grounds in St. Louis County Saturday afternoon.

Arkansas and Missouri will play a double-header at Columbia Saturday.

The change in the lineup of the St. Louis University team by sending Fitzporter to second and Beckmeyer behind the bat, shows how anxious St. Louis is to win the initial game o the series.

The St. Louis U.-C. B. C. game will be started at 3 o'clock.

It has been agreed to use two umpires for the game. The arbitrators had not been selected Saturday morning.

C. B. C. easily demonstrated its superiority over St. Louis at socker, but it does look as if St. Louis has the best baseball team.

DIFFER ABOUT RADTKE'S RIDING.

"Herman Radtke, the western jockey for whose contract Paul Rainey of Cleveland, recently paid $25,000, came in for close inspection during the afternoon," said the New York Sun in its notes on the opening day of the season at Aqueduct. "That he is a high class boy there can be no doubt, judging from his general carriage and ability. He put up a sterling finish on Toots Mook in the first race, won with Clark Griffith in clever style in the second, rode Rappahannock in the third, landed Red Knight in the money in the Carter at 30 to 1, and was unplaced with F. S. P. Randolph's Taunt, filly by Toddington —Llane, in the last event.

"The morning Telegraph, however, is not ready to admit that the Chicago lad is a skillful rider. The Telegraph says: 'Radtke, the Western jockey, rode his first Eastern winner when he piloted Clark Griffith home in the six furlong dash which was the second offering. It required no very great skill, however, to bring the Kinley colt home in front and from the way he galloped all the way it would have needed much more skill to have him lose."

Blind Like Light.

"When it comes to consuming gas in large quantities blind people take the lead," said an inspector of the gas company. "I know two families where both husband and wife are blind. Every jet is turned on full tilt in their clear up to 12 o'clock. And that partiality for light is not a whim peculiar to those two couples. All blind people feel that way. They demand the light, and in all private homes and institutions where the blind are cared for the gas bills vouch for their strange fancy."

TRIED TO COAX CHILDREN.

Man Who Has No Home Sent to the Workhouse.

Stephen Clark, who says he has no especial place of abode, was fined $200 by Judge Tracy in the City Hall Police Court Saturday for attempting to coax Catherine Hemp, 10 years old, from Tower Grove Park. He will go to the Workhouse. Catherine and Kate Vance, aged 10, were playing in the park when Clark approached and said he would give them $2 if they would go with him. They refused, and he attempted to take them with him, according to the story they told Judge Tracy.

Clark denied the charge and said he was only playing with the girls. Catherine lives at 4002 Botanical avenue and Kate at 4012.

Charged with disorderly conduct in tearing up a lot of voting ballots, Jerry Holloran, an enthusiastic East St. Louis Citizens' Party worker, was arrested and gave $100 bond Saturday to appear for trial on April 27.

The arrest came as an incident of the school election now being held in East St. Louis. Holloran, it is charged, came to the polls in the First Ward and, seeing a lot of Independent-Municipal ballots stacked ready for use, he deliberately tore them up and threw the pieces away. The judges of election ordered his arrest. He was arraigned before Justice Stanton and held for trial.

Russian Count Foils Assassins Who Throw Impact Explosive at Carriage.

KALISZ, Russian Poland, April 21.—While Count Keller, commander of the garrison here and a cousin of Lieutenant-General Count Keller, who was killed July 29, 1904, while repelling a Japanese attack in Manchuria, was driving with his wife in this city yesterday, a bomb was thrown at his carriage.

Count Keller caught the missile in his hands and, not striking a hard surface, it failed to explode. The man who threw the bomb escaped.

NO RECOGNITION FOR THE BOOKMAKERS.

In the betting ring on the opening day at Aqueduct the "Mets" made one last attempt to receive recognition. They wanted to have the front positions held for them exclusively and they begged hard for the privilege. But the Queens County Jockey Club remained firm in its determination to keep the ring open. So an open ring it was, with 54 "Mets" in the front line doing business on an equal basis with 26 outsiders. This arrangement filled the 80 places allotted to the front line in the enclosure, but no bookmaker had the right to say where he should sit, as Ringmaster Cavanagh settled that matter to his own satisfaction. There were 90 layers in the back line, making a total of 170, with a raft of business for all. The open ring is a permanent thing from which the public will receive undoubted benefits. The layers are compelled to pay a stated sum for information on each race. They cannot get details until they receive slips in the betting ring.

Faces, Not Plays, His Study.

For 20 years the man at the door of the Empire Theater, New York, has been taking tickets along Broadway, and in all that time he has never seen a show. He's been at the Empire for about ten years. Seldom, if ever, he gives out a door check between acts. He just remembers the faces. He never gives a door check to a woman. And he's never been fooled.

HUNTING FLAWS IN DANIELS' RECORDS

Two of Champion Swimmer's New Marks Were Not Made in Competition.

Two of the records made by C. M. Daniels, the New York Athletic Club champion swimmer, at the recent championship meet held in the Mercury Foot Tank, are being questioned, and it is expected that they will not be allowed to stand.

The world's record made by Daniels for 60 yards was made in a 50-yard race and the last 10 yards of the distance was not made in competition. A new American record was made by Daniels in the 1000-yard distance in the same way. The record was made while he was swimming in competition for the last half-mile contest and he made the first 130 yards of the 1000 without competition.

Swimming Director Frank J. Sullivan of the Central Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, has written to J. E. Sullivan of the A. A. U., asking if the records in the 60-yard and the 1000-yard distances will be allowed to stand. The rules of the A. A. U. specify that a record must be made in actual competition, but the circumstances under which Daniels made these records are unusual, that the officers of the A. A. U. may decide that they shall stand, as there is no question that Daniels covered the distances in the time indicated.

Secretary Sullivan of the A. A. U. was the referee at the races and watched the performance and took the time in the 50-yard race. Daniels swam the distance in the record-breaking time of 25 2-5s., now the American record. His speed was such that the timers and his friends sent him on after the 60-yard record, and he accomplished the distance in the phenomenal time of 31 1-5s., the former world's record being one second slower. It was held by Cecil Healy of Australia.

The same circumstances prevailed when the new American record for 1000 yards was made. He was in the 880-yard race and he covered the half-mile distance in 12 minutes 29 2-5 seconds, making a new record for this country and he was swimming in such fine condition that he was sent after the 1000-yard record. He covered the latter distance in 14 minutes 8 3-5 seconds, the former American record being 15 minutes and 22 seconds.

Americans will be surprised to learn that the records made by Daniels will not be allowed by the English swimming authorities because the time was not made in scratch races. When Daniels made his great bursts of speed he was competing in handicap races, but as he started from scratch there seems to be no good reason why his performance should not be accepted. The Amateur Athletic Union did not hesitate to accept the record.

The announcement that the records would not be accepted comes in the form of a communication from W. C. J. Kelly, president of the British Amateur Athletic Association, to J. E. Sullivan, of the American Association. Kelly adds that Cecil Healy, an English swimmer, recently swam 100 yards in 57 3-5 seconds, but the record was not allowed because the swimmer did not do it in a costume.

Baseball Babble

Roger Bresnahan leads the batting order of the Giants. It looks as if he would do most of the catching this year.

Fred Clarke is authority for the statement that Johnny McGraw has lost from $10,000 to $25,000 on the races this spring.

Barney Dreyfuss says that the Pirates are 30 per cent stronger than last season.

Pitcher Ruehlbach of Chicago has cut out his old side-arm delivery and is said to be doing better without it.

Adrian C. Anson, now City Clerk of the city of Chicago, announces that he is a candidate for the position of Sheriff of Cook County.

Manager Donovan of the Brooklyn club says that his aggregation will play aggressive ball this year. "Under Hanlon they played on the defensive all the time," said the boasting Pat. "With me they'll be on the offensive."

The New York Giants have a new garment to wear over their uniforms to and from the diamond when the weather is cool. It is a cross between a bathrobe and an ulster and is made of mackinaw cloth, a material that is popular in logging camps.

Manager Chance declares that Harry Steinfeldt's work will create a sensation in the National League this season. The big Texan is down to 168 pounds and is hitting the ball like a fiend.

Pitcher Elmer Stricklett has an antidote for alum, which it is alleged, certain teams will spring on the spit-ball pitchers this year. "Don't lock your fingers," says Stricklett.

STAGG MAY NOT COACH CHICAGO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
CHICAGO, April 21.—That Amos Alonzo Stagg will never again coach the University of Chicago football team is the report that is being freely discussed in athletic circles at the Midway school. The ailment which has been causing the Maroon director to take longer and longer vacations each year has been steadily undermining Mr. Stagg's health until it is feared that he will never take an active part in the training of the "C" athletes.

His failure to return Saturday as expected has strengthened the belief that the chief of western football is about to go into enforced retirement.

For the last three years he has been forced to take extended vacations at the end of each football season, each succeeding leave of absence being longer than the others. He has been away since the close of the last football season, and the reports from Florida, where he has been spending the winter, are to the effect that his condition will not permit his taking up his work again until the end of the spring quarter. This announcement is considered as preliminary to the news of his retirement.

When Mr. Stagg began his work with the football team last fall he appeared to be enjoying restored health. A few weeks of the strenuous work, however, brought back the rheumatic and nervous trouble, the exact nature of which doctors have as yet not been unable to tell. He continued his work throughout the season, using up his waning vitality to produce a winning team, the climax of his labors being the magnificent victory over Michigan on Thanksgiving day and the winning of the western championship by the Maroons.

Since that time he has done little save to attend the football rules committee meetings. The athletic system at the Midway has become chaotic under the charge of the assistant coaches and captains, and defeats have been the lot of the Maroons in nearly all their athletic contests since the closing of the football season.

Mr. Stagg's return is anxiously awaited by the students, but the fear that he will never again take complete charge of the athletic department is steadily gaining ground.

TOPICS of the Turf

Lally, England's noted 3-year-old, stands 16 hands 1 inch.

Jennie McCabe is working splendidly at Gravesend and should not be overlooked.

Ormondale is not being hurried in his preparation and will hardly be seen in public before the Belmont Park meeting.

Bellsnicker has a fever. That is why Senator McCarren ordered his withdrawal from the Union Stakes at Aqueduct Tuesday.

Workwatchers at Gravesend say that First Water is rapidly regaining his speed and that he should be a good horse this season.

Juvenal Maxim has been presented to the Bureau of Breeding in New York State. If the committee of inspection finds him sound he will be accepted.

Jockey Kelaszek rode his first winner at Memphis yesterday afternoon when he piloted Bogum to victory in the second race at post odds of 20 to 1.

Francis Trevelyan, who will be in the judges' stand at the Lexington meeting, has been putting in the week visiting the various breeding establishments in the Bluegrass region.

Delcanta is going nicely for Gwyn Tompkins and it is now said that "Mr. Cotton" will have the pleasure of seeing the Harbor Hill Cup winner fill his early engagements this season.

Robert A. Pinkerton has put a quietus on the football tactics of runners for the bookmakers in the betting ring at Aqueduct. Instead of permitting them to rush through the crowd and in front of the players, he forces them to work entirely behind the stools and to travel from book to book on the outside of the crowd.

The Governor-General of Canada has been informed that the stewards of the Jockey Club in England have elected Mr. William Hendrie, president of the Ontario Jockey Club, Toronto, an honorary member of the Jockey Club in England.

Roseben, according to Owner Davy Johnson, came out of the Carter Handicap in fine shape. The big horse will be sent along easily, with the idea of fitting him for the Metropolitan. If he goes well in that event he will be pointed for the Brooklyn and the Suburban, as Trainer Weir believes he can make a distance performer out of him.

Athletic Atoms

The annual cross-country run of the Western Amateur Athletic Union will be held Saturday afternoon at Forest Park, under the auspices of the Missouri Athletic Club. O'Connell, the young miler of the Cherry Diamond organization, is the favorite for the event.

What should prove to be one of the best amateur bouts of the season is the one scheduled between Rude Kreidler and Frank Gescheke in the monthly tournament of the M. A. C., Saturday night. Gescheke is one of the best lads of his weight ever developed in St. Louis, but Kreidler should give him an interesting battle.

C. B. C. WILL PLAY ST. LOUIS U. TODAY

Great Denominational Colleges Will Meet on Cote Brilliante Campus Saturday Afternoon for First Time in Five Years.

St. Louis University and Christian Brothers' baseball teams will meet at baseball for the first time in five years Saturday afternoon at the Christian Brothers' campus.

It should be one of the best college games of years and judging from the contests that both teams have played should prove most interesting.

Young, the crack pitcher of the Blue and White, who shut out the Chicago Americans without a run or hit while a member of the St. Mary's (Kan.) team is to twirl for St. Louis University and Beckmeyer, one of the best of the college receivers will do the backstopping. For the College, Menges and Coad will be in the points. Menges is the best of the C. B. C. slabmen and it is upon him that the Blue and Gold depend for victory.

Pete Ratican, who is wanted by Manager Watkins of the Indianapolis Club, will play at short for the College and Lonnie Fitsporter, one of the best amateur players ever developed in the city will be at second base for St. Louis U.

COLLEGE ATHLETICS OPEN THEIR SEASON

Saturday Marks the Beginning of the Outdoor Year for Followers of All Athletic Sports and Pastimes Both East and West.

Saturday will mark the formal opening of the outdoor season of track and field athletics. The event will be the twelfth annual relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania to be held on Franklin Field, Philadelphia. It will be more than an Eastern meeting, for it will bring together the stars of the East and West, and unless the intersectional championships are held in June, it will be the only meeting of the year between them. Aside from the high-class performances which are always recorded at these games, they are relished because they permit coaches and others to learn the true ability of the men representing the different universities. There is yet another incentive for the Western competitors. It affords them virtually the only opportunity to measure their strength with the East, and for several years past they have used it to demonstrate their superiority.

As in previous years, the features of the day will be the three intercollegiate relay events at one, two and four miles, carrying with them the championship of America. These events, especially the mile and four mile races, are to be duels between the East and West. Of the two the greatest interest is centered in the four-mile relay, for every mile quartet in the East wishes to humble the Michigan team, which has won this event three years in succession and last year established a new world record. Yale, Pennsylvania, Cornell, Harvard and Princeton will represent the East in a concerted fight to bring the championship to this section, while the Wolverines will be the lone entry from the West. But since Michigan still has three members of the 1905 championship teams and a fourth man who can beat 4:30 the task of the Eastern men seems to be a hopeless one. Chicago will uphold the honor of the West in the one-mile event and hopes to win the victory which many persons thought she deserved a year ago, so close was the finish between Yale, Penn and Chicago.

All of the special events will be well filled. These are to be the 100 yards dash, 120 yards hurdles, high jump, broad jump, pole vault, hammer throw, discus throw and shot put. In all of them the pick of America's best athletes will compete, and as one or more intercollegiate or American records are hung up at these meets every year, 1906 ought to be no exception. The competition of the school boys will be limited only by the capacity of the field and the length of the afternoon. Like their university elders they will come from every section of the country and their lines of battle will be drawn in similar fashion. All told there will be more than 1200 athletes in competition, a fit sign that track and field athletics are still booming in America.

WANT CITIZENS TO BACK RACES.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 20.—Information received here this morning from Hamilton, Ont., is to the effect that there will be no meeting held at Kenilworth Park, Buffalo, under the auspices of the Jockey Club unless the citizens of Buffalo get together and make up the amount necessary to run the plant. It has been a matter of gossip all winter that the loss at Buffalo to the backers of the meeting last year was nearly $50,000.

Meyer Is City Forester.

Andrew Meyer Jr., for three years Superintendent of Parks, is new City Forester under the ordinance passed by the Municipal Assembly near the close of the last session. The position pays $2400 a year. The position which Mr. Meyer relinquishes pays $1800 a year. Mayor Wells sent the appointment to the Council Friday.

WENTWORTH WALLOPS HASKELL INDIANS.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
LEXINGTON, Mo., April 21.—Wentworth defeated the Haskell Indians' first team here today by a score of 9 to 2. The game, while fast, was full of errors. The visitors did not show any particular brilliancy, while Taylor, Emery and Craig did the honors for Wentworth. Out of four times at bat Emery got a single, a three-bagger and a home-run. The latter, made in the first inning, brought in three runs. Batteries—W. M. A., Emery and Craig; Haskell, McLean and Baird.

The child was returning from church when a Bellefontaine car backed into her as she was crossing the street. M'KINLEY LINE OFFERS TO PAY $5000 A YEAR

Illinois Electric System Seeks Franchise Over North St. Louis Streets.

TO CROSS BY FERRIES

Free Bridge or One Built by Private Enterprise May Later Be Used.

St. Louis is offered $5000 a year for the use of several miles of streets mostly in the North End, over which the McKinley system of Illinois electric lines seeks franchises.

An ordinance providing for trackage to constitute the system's terminals in St. Louis was introduced in the City Council by Councilman Hitchcock Friday afternoon. The offer of an annual payment of $5000 for the privileges and grants sought is supplemented by a proposal to furnish a bond of $25,000 to guarantee observance of the conditions of the franchises. These are to embody practically the same provisions as to fares and hours of operation as are contained in the ordinances governing the United Railways Co.

The local corporation is known as the St. Louis Electric Terminal Railway Co. The directors are Charles Zilly, B. E. Bramble, J. W. Ferris and George M. Mattie of Champaign; and George L. Edwards, J. Herndon Smith and C. H. Moore of St. Louis. The company has already acquired land for extensive terminals in North St. Louis, including a tract of 24 acres, purchased at a cost of $500,000 from Peter E. Wilson.

On this land the company proposes to establish storage and terminal yards, express warehouses and eventually a passenger depot. Two or more passenger stations will be built in the central part of the city if the franchise is obtained.

Will Ferry Cars Across.

At present the company is using the Columbia Transfer Co.'s warehouse at Ninth street and Clark avenue, and that of the Collins Street Warehouse and Forwarding Co. at 240 Biddle street. A transfer ferry of special design will be operated between St. Louis and Venice to convey passenger and express cars over the river.

Later the line may cross on the municipal Free Bridge or structures built by private enterprise. Limited passenger trains will be operated between St. Louis and all points touched by the McKinley system in Illinois.

The terminals in St. Louis are to be operated in connection with the lines of the Illinois Central Traction Co., the St. Louis and Springfield, St. Louis and Northeastern and Danville, Edwardsville and Terminal companies. These lines give communication with towns in Illinois as far distant as Peoria, Bloomington, Decatur and Clinton.

The franchise is asked for 50 years. Work of construction is to begin within six months after the bill becomes an ordinance, and the operation of cars will follow within two years. The route of the proposed line, which is to be single track, is this:

Salisbury street, from the wharf to Ninth street; Ninth from Salisbury to Branch; Branch, from Ninth to Twelfth; Eleventh street, from Branch to Palm street; on Palm street, from Eleventh street to Twelfth street; on Twelfth street, from Branch street to Lucas avenue; on Linden street, from Twelfth street to Thirteenth street; on Thirteenth street, from Linden street to Gay street; on Gay street, from Thirteenth street to Twelfth street; on Morgan street, from Twelfth street to Eleventh street; on Eleventh street, from Morgan to Walnut street; on Walnut street, from Eleventh street to Eighth street; on Eighth street, from Walnut street to Clark avenue; on Clark avenue, from Eighth street to the wharf; on the wharf, from Valentine street to Lucas avenue, and on Lucas avenue, from the wharf to Broadway.

Seeking for Miss Hucke.

Walter Hucke has departed in an endeavor to learn the fate of his sister, Miss Ella Hucke, who is thought to have been in the Winchester Hotel when the earthquake devastated San Francisco. Miss Hucke and her mother had been spending the winter at Los Angeles and Pasadena. Several weeks ago Miss Hucke went to visit friends at San Francisco. A card received by relatives from her Thursday of last week, written from the Cliff House, contained the information that she would remain in San Francisco until Wednesday. Nothing further has been heard from her.

ACTOR WITH WIFE CAUSED QUARREL

Attorney Gelbart Wanted to Attack Big Man Escorting Mrs. Gelbart.

RESTRAINED BY FRIENDS

Encounter Took Place on Grand Avenue After Odeon Entertainment.

A fashionable crowd coming from the Morning-Choral entertainment at the Odeon Friday evening witnessed an encounter near the Central High School between Lawyer Sigmund B. Gelbart of the Roe Building and the man escorting his wife, whom he is suing for divorce. It took the combined efforts of several men to prevent a fistic demonstration. Gelbart hunted a policeman, but was dissuaded from taking any action for the present.

Gelbart, in the company of Richard Wirth of 3424 School street, a member of the Germania Theater Stock Company, was in a restaurant near Grand and Franklin avenues. They started for the Wirth home about 10:30 p. m., just as the crowd was leaving the Odeon.

Wirth was the first to notice Mrs. Gelbart, in the company of the German actor, who is referred to in Gelbart's divorce petition. He tried to lead Gelbart across the street, but Gelbart would not go.

The two parties came face to face. There was an outbreak. Gelbart sprang forward with a cry of rage. Wirth, however, grabbed him. The loud words of the two men attracted a crowd. Mrs. Gelbart walked off some distance and waited for the outcome of the encounter. Both men were held to prevent the exchange of blows. The actor, who was at one time an officer in the Austrian army, is a giant in comparison to Gelbart.

The lawyer, trembling with rage, accused the actor of wearing his wife's diamond ring, for which he paid $500 last June. This had come to Gelbart by hearsay, and the actor did not deny it. They were finally separated, Gelbart going to Grand avenue and Olive street, where he saw a policeman and demanded the actor's arrest. He was dissuaded from doing this by the officer.

Gelbart was seen by a Post-Dispatch reporter in the Roe Building Saturday and confirmed the reported encounter.

"I have not yet decided what legal steps I shall take," he said, "but I am determined not to let the matter go unnoticed. I am glad that we were prevented from coming to blows, but I was so enraged that I hardly know what I said or did. I do not believe any jury would have blamed me if I had used violence. I shall certainly push my divorce case, and my wife's withdrawal of the cross-bill makes it practically certain that I will get the decree."

SERGT. NOLTE TO GET LIEUTENANCY

He Is Picked to Succeed English, Who Has Offered Resignation.

POLICEMAN CUT BREAD

Two Captains Scolded for Not Knowing Police Manual by Sections.

Sergt. Louis Nolte of the Manchester Avenue Station is looked on at the Four Courts as the logical successor of Lieut. John E. English, who has tendered his resignation rather than to answer charges against him.

To Sergt. Nolte is given much of the credit for the uncovering of police graft. Nolte's testimony was valuable as corroborating that of Ollie Roberts and other women.

When Lieut. English was called to the Chief's office Friday, and was informed of the charges against him, he asked that he be not suspended at this time, as he was in the midst of arranging the annual benefit for the Police Relief Association, of which he is president. Chief Gillaspy said that was a secondary matter, and ordered his suspension.

English asked to be excused for a moment, and when he stepped back in the room his resignation, typewritten, was placed in Chief Gillaspy's hands.

It is anticipated that he will be allowed to resign without trial. A woman living on Vandeventer avenues is said to figure in the charges.

A month ago the attention of the acting Chief was called to Lieut. English's conduct by an anonymous telephone message. Assistant Chief of Detectives Keely and Detective Woodling were detailed to make investigation, and it was on their report that charges were filed.

Lieut. English lives with his family at 5716 Old Manchester road. He is 43 years old, and has been connected with the department since March, 1900, when he was appointed patrolman. In October, 1905, he was made a sergeant, and on the reorganization of the department was promoted to the rank of lieutenant. During the World's Fair he was Acting Captain at the Magnolia Avenue Station.

Cut Bread for Lunch.

"I plead guilty to cutting bread at a roadhouse lunch counter, but not guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer," said Policeman John O'Connor when he faced the board for trial Friday afternoon.

"Don't you think cutting bread in a roadhouse is unbecoming conduct?" asked President Stewart.

"No, sir, I do not," replied O'Connor emphatically.

It developed during the trial that O'Connor, who walks the beat extending from the west edge of Calvary Cemetery to the east edge of Bellefontaine, was in the habit of taking his lunch at Nick Gates' roadhouse on Florissant avenue. When there was a rush of business at the roadhouse he would, at the request of the proprietor, cut bread for the lunch.

O'Connor's defense was that he saved time for the city by eating his lunch at the roadhouse instead of going home, and that it was only as an accommodation that he sliced the bread.

In answer to President Stewart's question, O'Connor stated that he did not know it was a violation of the rules to enter a saloon.

Didn't Know it by Number.

Calling Captains Phillips of the Angelica Street District and McNamee of the Mounted before him, President Stewart asked them:

"What does paragraph K, section 5, article 6 in the manual state?"

The captains replied that they did not know.

"Well, I'm surprised!" exclaimed Mr. Stewart. "How can we expect to maintain a bright police force if the captains do not know the manual? Paragraph K, section 5, article 6 states that captains should continually instruct the men under their command as to the rules of the manual."

The two captains said they were familiar with that paragraph, but that they had ben unable to identify it from the manner in which President Stewart had referred to it.

"But do you live up to that rule?" asked the President.

The captains replied that they instructed new men.

"You should keep all the men posted as to the rules. Here's a man (referring to O'Connor) who has been on the force for 20 years, and he says he does not know it is a violation of the manual to enter a saloon. The people of St. Louis would praise the department once in awhile, instead of criticising it all the time, if the captains would pay more attention to their duty."

The charges against O'Connor were dismissed with a caution to the officer never to enter a saloon except in discharge of his duty.

Testimony by Telephone.

Policeman Thomas Smith was found guilty of failing to report the actions of a sidewalk spitter, who ruined the gowns of several women in front of the Olympic Theater two weeks ago with tobacco juice, and of absenting himself from his beat in front of the Southern Hotel.

Manager Pat Short, who was summoned as a witness, but was at the meeting of the San Francisco relief committee, told President Stewart over the telephone that he had complained to Smith about the spitting.

Smith explained that he did not report the spitting affair because he was unable to learn the names of the victims or the identity of the offender. His excuse for leaving his beat was that he accompanied a woman to Sixth street and Clark avenue to see if he could find her husband, who she said had deserted her.

Smith was fined $10 and reprimanded.

Policeman James Murray of the Carr Street Station was found not guilty of the charge of failing to make an arrest. While on his way home a few nights ago Murray heard a shot fired in the neighborhood of Twenty-second and Montgomery streets, and when he reached the scene found that a private watchman had arrested a man on the charge of stealing a ham. Murray allowed the watchman to take the prisoner to the North Market Street Station.

Policeman Con O'Keefe, who was tried by the board last week on the charge of swearing at a citizen, was voted not guilty. Messrs. Jones and Maroney were of the opinion that O'Keefe was guilty, while Messrs. Stewart and Fristoe held the opposite view. Mr. Maroney finally changed his vote.

The resignation of Patrolman John A. Pentony, Newstead Avenue Station, under charges of immoral conduct, was accepted. The charges against Patrolman Heet of the Manchester Avenue Station were laid over until the next meeting.

Clerk Matthew Corcoran of the Newstead Avenue District was dismissed from the force for sleeping while on duty.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Liverpool cables reflected a much better feeling there with fair spot sales. The fright over the San Francisco horror is subsiding and the feeling generally is much better. Cotton opened strong, but sold off 5 or 6 points and became dull with the rank and file of room traders bearishly inclined on account of the later favorable weather spell. The visible supply and spinners takings this week cannot be taken except as extremely bullish. Continental spinners show great anxiety to buy on the declines showing they are short or supplies. We think the short interest has been largely increased, and the weak longs shaken out and the situation very healthy with all the prospects heavy on the bull side and still advise our friends to take on the new crop months around 10½ cents and avoid the short side of May, as this option is entirely in the hands of a very few brainy and powerful men.

STOCKS WEAKEN IN THE LATE TRADING

Bank Statement Good, but Traders Sell Stocks on Its Publication.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The stock market opened barely steady today, with some issues showing losses and others gains. Trading was active and the sentiment in the financial district badly mixed.

Market opinion generally is still badly mixed over the effect of the Frisco disaster, and although a strong rally from the present level is likely, it is generally admitted that the bull campaign has been given a very severe blow.

For the time being the effect may not be so adverse, but ultimately the ill results of such a convulsion is financial affairs are bound to have their effect on values.

London showed no disposition to buy our securities today and, prices on Americans at that market were irregular. Consols and home issues were barely steady.

The trading fell away after the early buying had spent its force and prices dropped a small fraction under last night. The demand came mostly from the shorts and professionals and the commission-house business was very light. The best houses on the street were still advising conservatism in making purchases.

Outside of the Frisco disaster all the news of the week was favorable. The reports of the leading mercantile agencies reflected a heavy volume of business being transacted in all sections of the country, and the demand in the steel, iron and copper metal markets continues unabated.

Reports from the winter crop territory are also flattering in the extreme, and the promise is for an abundant crop in all sections. Money market conditions show distinct improvement, and the weakness in the sterling exchange market has raised the hope of additional gold imports in the coming week.

In the face of all this prosperity the financial structure has been given a shock which will take months to adjust, and as is usually the case with such happenings, it is a question whether it has not for all time placed a check on the bull speculation.

If precedent goes for anything, any strong recovery of prices to the recent high levels should be the culmination of the present bull movements. After the bull panic of 1901 the security list made almost a complete recovery, but the actual edge of the bull speculation had been taken off by the losses sustained.

After the collapse of the Flower boom some years ago stocks also made a complete recovery, but prices very quickly ran into a severe decline that extended over a period of nearly two years.

Now we have a big bull movement checked by the loss of $300,000,000 in property. It is reasonable to believe, then, that any recovery will be only temporary, and if these other precedents are taken as future indications, one cannot but expect that following any big recovery the present bull market has spent its force.

Stocks drifted until the publication of the bank statement, which was favorable in the extreme, then a realizing movment set in and prices dropped off fractionally all along the line. The closing was highly irregular around the lower level.

DECISION HALTS DIVORCE.

Husband Drops Suit With Service by Publication.

The divorce suit of Cornelius Williams against Ianthe Williams was withdrawn from Judge Withrow's court Saturday by Attorney John B. Dempsey, who represents Williams, because service on the wife had been by publication. The attorney feared that the suit might be adversely affected by the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, holding that divorces granted under such conditions are subject to attack.

The suit may be renewed after the exact effects of the decision are better understood. The couple were married in Bexar County, Texas, June 23, 1902. Williams alleges that his wife separated from him the same day. He thinks she is now in Houston.

WHEAT MARKET IS QUIET TODAY

Trade Confined to the Pit Element and Price Changes Are Small.

The wheat market was quiet and steady today, with the trade confined entirely to the pit element. All vestige of commission house support has disappeared and until some important news develops a traders' market, with small changes either way, is indicated.

Weather conditions still hold all bull speculation in check and reports from the winter wheat territory are highly optimistic. A few minor crop damage reports are coming to hand, but all in all the winter wheat condition could not be improved upon.

Local receipts were only moderate and the shipments about equal to the demand. The cash demand is very slow and flour dealers report business light.

In the Northwest receipts still show a tendency to lighten and Minneapolis and Duluth reported only 156 cars, against 389 cars last week, 252 last year and 87 two years ago. Winnipeg reported 199 cars, against 48 last year, and Minneapolis stocks decreased nearly 600,000 bu for the past week.

Foreign markets were very quiet and prices trended downward. Liverpool wheat closed ⅛d lower and corn ⅛d lower. Berlin closed ⅝c lower, Budapest ¼c lower, Paris ¼c up and Antwerp unchanged.

Australian wheat shipments for the week were 824,000 bu, against 856,000 bu last week and 824,000 bu last year. Indian shipments were 192,000 bu, against 880,000 bu last week and 248,000 bu last year.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments of wheat on Monday at 9,600,000 bu, of which quantity Europe will take about 8,000,000 bu. Only slight changes are indicated for the grain on passage.

The corn market was inclined to be easy on the ideal weather for planting and slightly increased offerings. Oats were very quiet, but firm throughout.

Primary movement—Receipts, wheat, 342,247 bu, against 652,000 bu last year; corn, 216,270 bu, against 571,531 bu last year; oats, 442,875 bu, against 560,975 bu last year. Shipments, wheat, 474,431 bu, against 359,000 bu last year; corn, 663,605 bu, against 680,000 bu last year; oats, 634,806 bu against 340,000 bu last year.

St. Louis—Receipts and shipments—Receipts, wheat, 35,645 bu; corn, 61,000 bu; oats, 67,500 bu. Shipments, wheat, 57,340 bu; corn, 44,240 bu; oats, 141,440 bu.

In Memoriam.

At a meeting of the directors of the St. Louis Mercantile Library Association, held on April 18, the following memorial was placed on the records:

The directors of the St. Louis Mercantile Library Association desire to express their deep sense of the loss which this organization has sustained in the death of Benjamin S. Adams. His associates in a work to which he had so unselfishly lent his services as secretary and director for 21 years are especially mindful of his devotion to the library and its uses in this community. The frank kindliness of his nature and his deep interest in the welfare of those who were fortunate enough to be thrown with him made it a boon to all who either shared his labors or enjoyed his companionship. In this body, which so profited by his loyal support and valuable services, we especially recognize and recall his value.

The early days of the library were by no means free from embarrassments of many kinds, but his buoyant hopefulness in the midst of such trials was a resource to his fellow-workers, and when brighter and more prosperous days came, it was a source of pride that he had contributed so materially to the improved conditions.

A useful citizen of St. Louis, his bearing in his business affairs and the influence of his upright life made him an example in the community. But we may not omit to mention qualities which so endeared him to those who were the fortunate possessors of his friendship. Endowed by nature with rare kindliness and a keen interest in the welfare of all who were near to him, he accepted the many fortunate incidents of life for the increased aid and happiness he could thus bring to others, and when the sorrows and disappointments came which inevitably overtake even the most fortunate, he met them with characteristic patience and courage which were the admiration of all his friends. We, who shall miss him sorely, seek in our sorrow in his loss the slender comfort of this testimony of his merit and worth as a citizen, of his great value as our associate, and his rare gifts as a friend.

HENRY C. SCOTT, President.

KILLS SISTER'S HUSBAND TO PROTECT HER

J. E. Stevenson, Stabbed by Brother-in-Law, Dies at Mother's Home.

QUARRELED WITH WIFE

MADE DYING STATEMENT

Told Mother He Was Looking Out of Window When Attacked.

In a detailed statement made to his mother an hour before his death at 5 a. m. Saturday, J. Edward Stevenson said that he was stabbed without provocation by his brother-in-law, William Segar. The men fought in the Stevenson apartments in Mrs. M. Zilch's boarding house at 3912 North Eleventh street. Segar is now a prisoner.

After Stevenson was wounded at 7 p. m. Friday he was taken to the home of his parents at 813 Bremen avenue. There he was cared for by Dr. Martin F. Harmann of 3441 North Ninth street, and by his mother, Mrs. C. S. Stevenson, who is a trained nurse.

Mrs. Stevenson was with her wounded son constantly from the time he was brought into the house until his death.

Stevenson was 33 years old. He was an engineer, employed in Granite City, and eight months ago married a sister of William Segar. She had been divorced from a former husband, Dr. May, at Wellington, Kan., and had a 4-year-old daughter, May. Stevenson has been divorced from a former wife, and had a son, Ray, 7 years old.

There were domestic differences, and on four occasions Stevenson's mother says, they separated, only to become reconciled. Two months ago they took rooms at the house at 3912 North Eleventh street, furnished them and did light housekeeping.

Were Friends an Hour Before.

"Last night," said Mrs. Stevenson, "William Segar came to our house and asked to see my son. While he was standing on the step my son came. He had a package of dry goods in his arms and the men greeted each other pleasantly. Edward asked William to go home with him for supper, and the invitation was accepted. I saw them walk away together.

"I heard nothing of the trouble until the ambulance brought my son here. I realized that he was in a desperate condition and never left his side for a minute.

"Early this morning Edward called me and said that he knew that he only had a short time to live and that he wanted to make a statement. So he made it to me, speaking slowly:

"'My wife and I were seated at the table with William,' he said, 'and something was said about the children. My wife contradicted me. I got up and left the table. I was looking out of the window when I was struck from behind by William. He hit me with his fist and knocked me down.

"I must have been unconscious for a minute or two, for when I came to I found I was stabbed.

Neighbors Hold Slayer.

Edward's body was black and blue in many places. He must have been struck many times, and with something more than a man's fist. When William attacked Edward, his wife ran out of the room and called for help. Neighbors and others who lived in the house ran into the room, and would not let William leave. The police brought William to the house here, and Edward identified him."

Dr. Harmann, who treated Stevenson, said that either of two stab wounds in the heart region were sufficient to produce death. There were seven stab wounds altogether, three in the left shoulder, two in the neck, and two in the heart region.

Stevenson was a member of the Sixth U. S. Cavalry during the Spanish-American War. At the request of her son, Mrs. Stevenson will adopt his son, Ray.

Segar, who lives at 318 Walnut street, is held at the Angelica Street Police Station pending the issuance of a warrant.

WORKHOUSE NOW STABBER'S HOME

Brady and Relatives Pleased by His Six Months' Sentence.

MORE CHARGES REMAIN

John Lawrence Brady, The Stabber, was taken to the Workhouse Saturday and commenced serving a sentence of six months, the penalty fixed by a jury in the Court of Criminal Correction.

The Stabber showed great satisfaction at the verdict.

He avoided arrest for several weeks after he ran through the downtown thoroughfares at dark on the evening of Jan. 22, inflicting knife wounds on a score of women.

Witnesses at the trial said The Stabber is unbalanced mentally. His parents separated while he was an infant, and some stress was laid on the theory that abuse had subverted his mind.

At the trial of the case, wherein The Stabber was charged with assault on Mrs. Martha Young with intent to do bodily harm, expert medical testimony was heard for and against the plea of insanity. The jury disregarded the testimony in that particular because the experts did not agree.

The mother and other relatives were in the courtroom when sentence was passed, and showed relief that the punishment was no greater.

Two other cases, similar to that on which Brady was convicted, and six informations of the same character, on which no return has been made, may be brought up against him after he has served his term.

MORE SUPPLIES SENT.

Fourteen Cars Loaded With Tents Leave St. Louis.

A train load of 14 cars will leave Union Station Saturday night for San Francisco, loaded with tents, cots, blankets and stoves for the sufferers. Three carloads were sent Friday night. All are from the Government depot in St. Louis.

Col. Von Schrader, in charge of the Government stores at the Arsenal and Jefferson Barracks, received orders from Washington to ship all supplies of this character on hand. Two thousand stove tents, with the necessary sections of pipe, 400 cots and 700 blankets, are among the supplies that will be sent. There were 29 large storage tents and 31 hospital tents, fully equipped with medicines and sanitary bandages.

Lieut. William A. Powell, assistant surgeon at Jefferson Barracks, has been ordered to leave for San Francisco with two members of the post hospital corps. Seventy recruits under Lieut. J. S. E. Young are being held in readiness to proceed to the Presidio.

HE CELEBRATED HIS ENGAGEMENT

Wife Who Wants Divorce Says She Regarded That as Justifiable.

RING WON FORGIVENESS

Woman Witness Condones "Dammit" Because She Sometimes Uses Phrase.

Mrs. Ida McGill, who wants a divorce from Henry McGill, on the ground that he drank too much, swore at her and smashed things, denied to Judge Taylor Friday afternoon that she knew all about her husband's drinking habits before she married him.

McGill had testified that when he was boarding at the home of a relative of his wife, before they were married, he and the relative often came home so mellow that they had to help each other up the stairs.

"I only knew of him drinking too much once while we were going together," testified Mrs. McGill. "That was when he celebrated our engagement. He went downtown to get the engagement ring and met a lot of his friends and drank with them, and when he came home he was a little too jolly. When he brought the ring to me he begged me to forgive him, and I did."

"You thought that he had a good excuse that time, did you?" asked Attorney Grimm.

"Certainly," said Mrs. McGill.

Mrs. Highleyman, one of the witnesses for McGill, supported his testimony that his wife did not let him do the swearing for the whole family. She said she had heard Mrs. McGill swear.

"What did she say?" asked Attorney Nichols.

"'Dammit.'"

"How often did you hear her say 'Dammit?'"

"Two or three times, maybe. I didn't take particular notice. I sometimes say 'Dammit' myself, so I didn't think much of it."

George Barth told of McGill having gone to sleep on a chair on a Sunday afternoon in the presence of company while visiting at the Barth home.

"That's a common thing," commented Attorney Nichols, for the defendant. "I have done that myself."

"When visiting?" asked Attorney Grimm.

"Yes."

"I didn't think it of you."

Mrs. McGill denied that she had ever struck her husband. "He's too big," she explained.

She was asked what she had with which to support her baby, and she said she had several hundred dollars.

"Anything else?" she was asked.

"Two strong hands," she said quickly.

CREEK IS PROTECTED.

Temporary Injunction Stops Rock Branch Change.

Rock Branch will continue to flow in the channel of its own creation around Gravois road and Bates street at least until next Tuesday. Circuit Judge McDonald has issued a temporary injunction restraining the Dresden Investment Co. and Richard Rothwell from giving it a new bed. It was issued at the instance of the Aiple & Hemmelmann Real Estate Co.

The creek runs through a subdivision owned by the Dresden company. The Aiple & Hemmelmann company owns property adjoining that of the Dresden company. The Dresden company proposes to so change the course of the creek as to cause it to flow along the line between the two properties. Rothwell is the contractor.

CROWD CHASES NEGRESS.

Purse Snatcher, Captured, Takes Morphine in Cell.

Rose Harris, a negress, is a prisoner at the Four Courts following an exciting chase when she snatched a purse on Broadway and an unsuccessful attempt to end her life. The purse belonged to Miss Nellie McIntyre of 3990 Sarpy avenue, and 200 joined in the pursuit, which resulted in the capture of the negress.

Although she fought bitterly, she was landed in a cell. Then she swallowed morphine. She was pumped out at the City Dispensary.

MURDER MYSTERY STIRRED CABANNE

Man Dropped What Looked Like Dead Body Into Pond Late at Night.

POLICE PUT ON GUARD

This Morning Workman Returned for Clothes He Had Left Soaking.

Cabanne awoke Saturday supposedly in the throes of another pond murder mystery, but Cabanne was "just supposing," for the young couple on the 5900 Von Versen avenue block, who thought they saw a murderer and his accomplice drop a lifeless body into a pond across the street from where they were, simply saw a workman leaving his working clothes in the water over night to get some of the mud off.

After a long night vigil and by the dragging of the pond by mounted police, armed to the teeth and ready to make a last, long stand against the "murderers" should they return to sink any more bodies, Policeman McVey saw the workman come back early this morning and get his clothes.

George Amos called on Miss Pansy Owens of 5901 Von Versen avenue Friday night. They were enjoying the pleasant evening on the front porch of the Owens home. About 9 o'clock two mysterious men walked up the other side of the street.

For a moment they paused, slinking in the shade of the electric light pole, according to the police report. Beside them was an old cellar excavation, with no modern improvements, full of water. That was the pond. "Murderer" No. 1 crept stealthily up and lowered something, with a splash into the pond. To the young couple it looked like a body. Even the proverbial rock was attached to make it sink. The rock afterwards proved to be a pair of old working shoes.

The young couple walked up to the corner drug store, took an ice cream soda and notified the police of what they had seen.

This morning John Nelson, a resident of St. Louis County, who had been working in sewers in the neighborhood for several days, appeared on the scene, pulled his old working clothes out of the water and hung them out in the sun to dry.

The mystery was solved.

FIRE NEAR HOTEL.

Guests of the Hamilton Alarmed by the Noise.

A still alarm of fire, telephoned to the Cabanne Arcade Department by Night Clerk Eugene Conley of the Hamilton Hotel, Hamilton and Maple avenues, took the Fire Department clanging to the scene at 5:30 this morning to extinguish a small blaze on the porch roof of the employes' frame dwelling next to the hotel.

The blaze was evidently caused, the firemen said, by a lighted cigarette thrown out of a window of the hotel or the adjoining house. Many of the hotel guests were awakened and prepared for a hasty exit in case the fire spread, but the work of the firemen was swift and no serious damage was done.

TEN DAYS' LABOR TRUCE.

Building Operations Can Proceed Until May 2.

An armistice to continue 10 days, while efforts are being made to establish permanent peace betwen the Building Trades Council and the Master Builders' Association, has been declared by representatives of the organizations.

The truce provides that all operations on buildings in the city shall continue from next Monday until May 2. In the meantime the differences between the two bodies will be the subject of conferences and concessions. The only stumbling block is the independent union of carpenters. It is thought that the Master Builders may be able to have them reinstated by the Carpenters' District Council without prejudice.

DIVORCE DECISION.

Judge Grants Order for Publication With Reserve.

Judge Hough of the Circuit Court is the first to take judicial cognizance of the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court to the effect that divorces obtained where the defendant is a resident of another State and notice is by publication are open to attack.

When E. Porter Peers, attorney for Albert A. Schlew, plaintiff in a suit for divorce against Laura M. Schlew, asked for an order of publication, Judge Hough said he was not fully advised of the effect of the decision, but he was inclined to follow it.

Attorney Peers contended that the validity of a divorce decree was not affected so long as the plaintiff remained a resident of the State in which it was obtained. The order was granted, the Judge, however, reserving the right to make such ruling as he sees fit when the case comes to trial.

NEW BUSCH BILL IS INTRODUCED

Does Not Provide for Compensation for City Now for Paving of Streets.

The Manufacturers' Railway bill, better known as the Busch bill, which caused a great many rows in the Council during the last session and finally died of amenditis, is before the upper branch of the Municipal Assembly again. At the meeting Friday afternoon Mr. Cramer, the father of the old measure, introduced a rejuvenated bill.

The new bill eliminates the clause referring to the compensation to the city. It also omits the requirement that the streets along the line of railway should be paved by the company.

The old clause regarding the depression of tracks between Broadway and Grand avenue is retained, but the bill provides for depressions west of Grand avenue only when the Assembly so orders by ordinance.

JEALOUSY MADE WIFE END LIFE

Neighbors Do Not Support Woman's Story of Mistreatment.

The young woman who swallowed carbolic acid at the Wabash Station in St. Charles, concealing her identity, was Mrs. Nancy Pyle, wife of Irvin Pyle of 1310 Washington avenue.

Thomas Slavin of 1313 Illinois avenue, East St. Louis, was serving on a jury Friday, but read the Post-Dispatch description of the dead woman and recognized it as that of his sister-in-law. He came at once to St. Louis and accompanied the husband to St. Charles. The body was brought back to St. Louis Saturday, and will be buried in East St. Louis.

Pyle said at St. Charles that he knew of no motive for the suicide unless it was jealousy. Mrs. Phoebe Pyle of 2730 Olive street, the mother, said she thought her son's wife was mentally unbalanced.

Coroner Ilch returned a verdict of suicide after listening to the testimony of the Wabash employes to whom the young woman had talked. She told them her husband had mistreated her and that she was fleeing from him.

Mrs. Pyle was 23 years old. Her husband is 25. People in the rooming house at 1310 Washington avenue, which Mr. and Mrs. Pyle conducted, say they did not quarrel.

Mrs. Pyle's former home was in Centralia, Ill. She will be buried in East St. Louis.

Husband, Discouraged by Business Failure, Ends Life.

Fred Rahning of 1422 Wright street, discouraged at the age of 36, by failure in business, kissed his wife an affectionate farewell and went to a saloon at 900 Tyler street, where he swallowed carbolic acid. Then, without a moan, he put his face on his arms and died beside a table.

The saloon belonged to Edward Neumann, a half-brother of Rahning. He was waiting on a customer when the poison was swallowed. Mrs. Rahning did not have money to pay burial expenses, and the body was taken to the Morgue.

Sixteen-Story Building Plans Please Appeals Board.

New application has been made for a building permit for the 16-story Century Annex, to be built at Tenth and Olive streets, at a cost of $1,800,000, following the approval of the plans by the Board of Appeals on the Department of Buildings. The board made certain changes in the plans, and provided more rigid precautions against fire.

The structure is to be 16 stories high, and will cover more ground than any other high building in St. Louis. The first seven or eight stories will be used for a department store and the others for offices. To prevent the spread of fire from one to the other, separate elevators will be provided and the separating floor will be reinforced against fire. Three fire escapes along the entire height of the building will be provided. A fireproof passageway will separate it from the present Century Building.

THE LAXATIVE OF KNOWN QUALITY

There are two classes of remedies: those of known quality and which are permanently beneficial in effect, acting gently, in harmony with nature, when nature needs assistance; and another class, composed of preparations of unknown, uncertain and inferior character, acting temporarily, but injuriously, as a result of forcing the natural functions unnecessarily. One of the most exceptional of the remedies of known quality and excellence is the ever pleasant Syrup of Figs, manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., which represents the active principles of plants, known to act most beneficially, in a pleasant syrup, in which the wholesome Californian blue figs are used to contribute their rich, yet delicate, fruity flavor. It is the remedy of all remedies to sweeten and refresh and cleanse the system gently and naturally, and to assist one in overcoming constipation and the many ills resulting therefrom. Its active principles and quality are known to physicians generally, and the remedy has therefore met with their approval, as well as with the favor of many millions of well informed persons who know of their own personal knowledge and from actual experience that it is a most excellent laxative remedy. We do not claim that it will cure all manner of ills, but recommend it for what it really represents, a laxative remedy of known quality and excellence, containing nothing of an objectionable or injurious character.

There are two classes of purchasers; those who are informed as to the quality of what they buy and the reasons for the excellence of articles of exceptional merit, and who do not lack courage to go elsewhere when a dealer offers an imitation of any well known article; but, unfortunately, there are some people who do not know, and who allow themselves to be imposed upon. They cannot expect its beneficial effects if they do not get the genuine remedy.

To the credit of the druggists of the United States be it said that nearly all of them value their reputation for professional integrity and the good will of their customers too highly to offer imitations of the manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., and in order to buy the genuine article and to get its beneficial effects, one has only to note, when purchasing, the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—plainly printed on the front of every package. Price, 50c. per bottle. One size only.
